World Art On Display

Some 50 paintings, drawings, and prints from John Henricks' collection of contemporary art of Europe, Africa, Asia, and the Americas were on display in GC's art gallery in January.

Chosen from his collection of well over 200 works, the art objects comprised one of seven exhibitions from off campus that is to be available to students and the public this year.

Among the advantages of a spacious gallery on campus is its educational value. Students who are preparing to be artists or to teach art hardly need to be encouraged to visit it. For other students, the gallery is a center for inspiration, a place to study aesthetics and to respond to the beautiful in art.

Prof. Abner Hershberger, gallery director, has arranged for an exhibit of the wood sculpture of the much-in-demand and distinguished David Hostetler, sculptor-in-residence at Ohio University. The show, one of the high lights of 1969 and GC's 75th Anniversary Year celebration, will open on March 23 and close on April 14. The exhibit will be open during GC's 71st annual commencement, which is set for April 12-14, at the end of the winter trimester.

Other exhibits planned for the spring are "Contemporary Mexican Prints," Jan. 25-Feb. 16; "Senior Art Majors Show," Feb. 23-March 16; "Annual Student Exhibition," May 4-June 1; "Paintings by Young Africans," June 7-June 29; and "Richard Graber Photography," July 6-Aug. 1.

Exhibits during the 1968 fall trimester included "Faculty Exhibition" and a group show of selected works by prominent Chicago artists associated with the Contemporary Art Workshop. In November and December, Richard Peeler, professor of art at DePauw University, displayed his ceramics.

Wood carvings from Africa were among the art objects on display in the gallery during January.

75th Year To Be Noted

Dr. Paul Mininger, president of Goshen College, has set June 6 and 7 as the 75th Anniversary Convocation Weekend.

The program and the speakers for the 75th Anniversary Convocation will be announced in a few weeks, Pres. Mininger said.

Plans for surrounding events are not yet final, but the activities will include a special series of meetings for the more than 600 Goshen College Counselors and pastors and for GC's College Admissions Representatives.

Other high lights of the weekend will be dedication of the Harold and Thelma Schrock Plaza, a special dinner for the graduates of the classes of 1919 and before, the annual alumni banquet, and the traditional alumni reunions that in earlier years were held at commencement time.

Class of '12 Grad Gives Pipe Organ to College

Dr. Paul Mininger, president of Goshen College, announced in early December a gift of a $40,000 pipe organ from Mrs. Fannie B. Severson, a graduate of the class of 1912.

Mrs. Severson, the former Fannie Rupp, of Archbold, Ohio, now of Rockford, Ill., is by profession a teacher and writer. After graduation from Goshen, she taught several years in the public schools of Ohio and completed advanced study at Ohio State University in education.

An author, she published in 1949 a memorial book about her youngest son, Robert Duncan Severson, who was killed in action just before the close of World War II. She is currently researching the history of her father, the late Jacob Rupp, and his family for publication. Her gift is a memorial to her father.

Dr. Mininger said the organ, which is being made in West Germany, will be installed in the Church-Chapel. Preparation for installation will begin after final drawings and plans are accepted, with completion of the project expected in about 18 months.

Personally Presented Gift

Mrs. Severson, in presenting the gift, said during convocation the day the gift was announced, "When I was here for the dedication of the new library, I learned that there was a need for a pipe organ for the Church-Chapel. I have since had the pleasure of discussing this with several committees of the faculty.

"My research into the early background of my family in Europe and America has given me a renewed interest in the Mennonite Church and in Goshen College.

"Goshen entered the field of higher education only a few years before I enrolled in 1906. My renewed interest in Goshen has been due to the fact that in spite of periods of depression, it has taken its place in forging ahead into bold new plans in the field of higher education."

Dr. Mary Oyer, head of the college's department of music, in response, said, "With this instrument it will be possible for Goshen College to offer organ instruction to a larger number of students and teach the full range of organ literature. Advanced students will have much richer resources than before. We will be able to invite the finest organists to give recitals.

Offer Leadership to Church

"At a crucial time when Mennonite congregations are examining their worship patterns, we will be able to offer leadership in the use of such an instrument in a way that has integrity.

"A rather surprising pleasure that has come to me, along with this gift, is learning to know the donor. I should have known that any person who sought out the needs of a school, who tried to learn to know the persons involved, who cared greatly about the quality of the gift, would be special in other kinds of ways, too.

"Although Mrs. Severson entered college over 60 years ago, she's not about to retire, and never will, I'm sure. She has inherited much of the inventiveness of her father; she continues with research in various fields and has amazing writing skill. She cares about producing plays and pageants with her grandchildren to keep them alive and vigorous during the summer. She has many other imaginative schemes going all the time.

"It will be difficult for us to separate the instrument from the vitality and spirit of the giver."

Dr. Mininger thanked Mrs. Severson and interpreted the significance of her gift in enabling the college to enrich further the educational program in the fine arts and humanities.

February Colloquium on "Education and Values"

A colloquium on "Education and Values," to be held February 12-14, will be one of this winter's special events in GC's 75th Anniversary year.

According to Dr. Atlee Beechy, chairman, the theme will be "Toward an Understanding of Freedom."

The colloquium, with major addresses during convocation and again in late afternoon or evening, is designed to fit the schedules of the Annual School for Ministers as well as those of students and faculty.

Among the topics for the addresses are "Freedom and the College Student," "Freedom and the Personality Development of Students," and "The Christian and Freedom."

Speakers will be Dr. William H. Grant, of the School of Education of Michigan State University, on Feb. 12; Dr. Peter A. Bertocci, professor of philosophy at Boston University, on Feb. 13; and Dr. Dale Brown, associate professor of Christian theology at Bethany Theological Seminary, on Feb. 14.

Values and Freedom Important

It is hoped that the special series of addresses, which are planned so that discussion can follow after each session, will enlarge the awareness of all who attend of the importance of values and meaning of freedom for the Christian. Further, it is hoped that the conferees will have a chance to examine in depth the value of freedom in Western thought and to understand more adequately what freedom means in personality development and in other areas of society.

The idea to sponsor such a colloquium on the campus was sparked over two years ago. It was in the thinking of college leaders soon after Lilly Endowment, Inc., an Indianapolis-based foundation, made funds available to Goshen College late in 1966 to set up an Office of Experiments in Christian Higher Education.

The primary purpose of the new office was to study and develop projects through which the College can effectively influence the moral and religious values of students. One way to inform students and faculty on current thinking and research on values is to sponsor such a colloquium.

Will Share Findings

It is the intention of the College to share findings from its projects with Christian liberal arts colleges across the nation. Known as "models," the projects will be designed to uphold the concepts of basic Christian commitment and discipleship, caring for persons, integrity, stewardship, personal and social responsibility, vocation, Christian witness and service — all of which are of growing concern to others in higher education.

A number of experimental projects were laid out in preliminary form last spring. In preparing for them, the staff of Experiments in Christian Higher Education studied the moral and spiritual values central to the teaching program of the College, and gave particular attention to the conditions under which values are most effectively learned.

Two Pilot Projects

In the months ahead at least two pilot projects will be carried out. Crucial to all efforts of the College, the projects are:

A. Moral and spiritual values in general education. This project will require reorganization of the total general education program to make it more effective in communicating the Christian faith and ethic. Dr. John S. Oyer is giving the leadership to this project.

B. Moral and spiritual values through participation in voluntary community service. This project will center in the educational value in voluntary (unsalaried) service to fellow students on campus, to churches, and to help meet the needs of the local community. Currently the College is seeking for a qualified person to give leadership to this project.

It is interesting to note that a small number of other educators have set up experiments to teach values and do research concerning the process by which values are learned. Among them has been Dr. Ernest Ligon, currently at the Character Research Project, of Schenectady, N.Y. He carried out a project at Wayland Baptist College, of Plainview, Texas.

Sherers on Latin America Tour

Dr. and Mrs. Lon Sherer, of the Goshen College faculty, began on January 10 a special 17-day concert tour to six Latin American nations.

The concert tour is at the invitation of the Bi-National Cultural Centers, of Latin America. Mr. Sherer, violinist, and Kathryn Sherer, pianist, will play eight concerts during the tour.

They will perform in San Salvador, capital of El Salvador; Tegucigalpa, capital of Honduras; Managua, capital of Nicaragua; San Jose, capital of Costa Rica; Bogota, capital of Colombia, and in Panama City.

For their concert programs the Sherers will perform the Sonata Quinta by Fontana, a 17th century Italian composer; Sonata in B Flat Major, K. 468, by Mozart, Sonata in C Minor, Op. 32, No. 2, by Beethoven, and two works by 20th century United States composers — Sonata No. 4 "Children's Day at the Camp Meeting" by Charles Ives and "American Folk Song Suite" by Ross Lee Finney, composer-in-residence at the University of Michigan.

Dr. Sherer, who is the violinist in Goshen College's Faculty Trio and has performed at colleges and universities throughout the midwest and along the Atlantic coast, said there is a sizable flourishing concert life in each of the cities where he and Mrs. Sherer will perform. He has also performed as a soloist with the Elkhart Symphony Orchestra and with folk artist Richard Dyer-Bennet, both in special Lecture-Music numbers at the College.

The Sherers perform in six Latin American capitals in January.

Dr. Sherer received the bachelor of music degree from Michigan State University and the master of music and doctor of music arts degrees from the University of Michigan. Before joining the faculty of Goshen College in 1959, he was on the staff of Woodstock School, of Mussoorie, India.

Mrs. Sherer, a 1954 graduate of Goshen College, beside accompanying her husband, last year accompanied violinist Miguel Serrano, of San Salvador, on his tour of a number of colleges in the midwest and eastern states.

Goshen College students in the school's Study-Service Trimester abroad program will be able to attend their concerts in Tegucigalpa, San Jose, and Managua. The students left January 2 for 14 weeks of study and service abroad in each of the three nations in the school's international education program which was inaugurated last fall. A number of GC students in Bogota for the entire year will be on hand for the concert in that city.

Returning to Goshen on January 26, the Sherers will be performing later this spring in Lincoln, Neb., and in Iowa City.

Students Hear Many During 75th Year

Students at Goshen College had the chance to hear a number of special speakers and music events during the first half of the 75th Anniversary Year of celebration.

The school year, 1968-69, marks the 75th since the beginning of the college as Elkhart Institute in 1894.

During the fall trimester special speakers in convocation and chapel included Swami Ranganathananda, Hindu lecturer from the Ramakrishna Mission of India; Dr. Colin W. Williams, director of the doctor of ministry program of the University of Chicago; Lehman F. Beardsley, vice president of the administrative services division and a member of the board of Miles Laboratories, Inc.; the Hon. Robert N. Thompson, a member of Canada's Parliament; Dr. Frank Epp, former editor of The Canadian Mennonite; and Dr. John E. Wagler, clinical pathologist.

Swami Ranganathananda and Dr. Williams were guest speakers during a special week of services, "The Church Converses with the World," last November. The Swami spoke on "Spirit of Indian Culture." On his second day he shared the platform with Dr. C. Norman Kraus, GC professor of religion; together they spoke with one another on "Comparative Values of Christianity and Hinduism."

Dr. Williams spoke on "Secularism as a Religion" and "The Validity of the Secular as a Dimension of Christian Concern." During the fifth convocation of that week a group of students and professors discussed, "How can we best converse with the world?" One of their targets was the gap between the college student and the average citizen.

Convocation Lecturers

Two speakers addressed students and faculty in extended convocations known as "convocation-lectures" so far this school year. The Hon. Robert N. Thompson, professor of political science at Waterloo University and a member of Canada's Parliament, spoke on "Canada, Your Neighbor to the North — at One Hundred Plus One" on October 25. Mr. Lehman F. Beardsley spoke December 6 on "Current Social Problems: The Responsibility of the Business Sector."

Dr. Frank Epp, currently director of studies in international conflict for MCC in Ottawa, Canada, spoke on the theme, "The Christian in Revolution" in the special annual emphasis on peace, October 21-23. Two of his addresses were "Sometimes I Pray for Nuclear War but I've Never Yet Said, Amen!" and "On Being Afraid of Communism."

Dr. John E. Wagler, clinical pathologist studying at Goshen College Biblical Seminary this year, spoke December 11 on "Addiction: Psychedelic, Narcotic, and Psycho-Social."

Musicians Perform

Among the performers sponsored by the College so far this year have been Martin Neary, organist at St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, London, England; Marion D. Schrock, clarinetist from the University of Michigan; and Charles Burkhart, pianist, of Queens College, who made his New York debut this season.

In the annual Lecture-Music Series, the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Izler Solomon, performed in mid-October, and Ashish Khan, a native of India and master of the sarod, performed in late October. Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" was performed in early November by the National Players. "Middle East Tinderbox," a film-lecture, was shown on December 5.

Special Events to Come

A number of special speakers, music events, and other programs are being planned for the rest of the school year to highlight the celebration year. A calendar of events is found on Page 3 of this issue.

The Goshen Post Office, in action that has never been taken before in its history, adopted a special cancellation hub on January 1, 1969, that cancels first-class mail with a slogan honoring GC's history. The slogan imprinted on letters and other items sent first class reads, "Goshen College 75th Anniversary 1894-1969." According to the Postmaster, the cancellation will be used all year unless Congress decrees the temporary use of a special cancellation by all post offices across the nation.

Ninety-seven Students on 'SST' For Winter Trimester

A total of 97 Goshen College students left January 2 for 14 weeks in Central America and the Caribbean.

Two groups — one of 17 to Honduras and one of 19 to Nicaragua — launched the first Study-Service Trimester units abroad in those nations. The unit in Honduras, based in Tegucigalpa, is being led by Dr. and Mrs. H. Clair Amstutz; Dr. and Mrs. Marion R. Wenger are leading the unit in Nicaragua, based in Managua.

The other three groups went to locations which opened last September. Twenty-two students went to Costa Rica, where Dr. and Mrs. J. Daniel Hess are the leaders; 18 went to Guadeloupe where Dr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Smucker are the leaders; and 21 went to Jamaica where Dr. and Mrs. S. A. Yoder are the leaders.

To these units will be added two more in late April. Prof. and Mrs. Arlin Hunsberger will lead a unit in Haiti during the spring trimester, which ends August 1. A second unit will open in Costa Rica, also in April, to bring the total of overseas units in full operation to seven.

The Study-Service Trimester program makes Goshen College the only known college to have an extensive on-going program in foreign cultures year round available to all students and directed by its own faculty. Further, the program is the only one known to combine study and service for a meaningful learning experience.

In addition, students overseas do not live together in a dormitory setting; rather, they live in the homes of host families and from these homes commute to classes. The college is the first known to require international education for graduation and the first known to make such education available to every student.

Week-Long Field Trip

One high light of the study portion of the new Honduras program is a week-long field trip of the country. Another will be examination of the centuries-old Maya civilization and its ruins.

During the seven-week service portion of the trimester, students will assist at a number of locations, including an orphanage for 145 parentless children operated by Sister Maria Rosa. Sister Maria Rosa several years ago, on a visit to a filthy crowded penitentiary, came upon a large number of children who were living inside the prison with parents serving long terms. Dr. Amstutz, who knows Sister Maria Rosa, said the children can end up in prison with their parents because of the lack of child-care institutions and the lack of community interest in the problem.

Country of Lakes and Volcanoes

The unit in Nicaragua — the country of lakes and volcanoes — was also launched this month.

The original occupants of the land were the Nicarao and Nahua Indians, the latter most closely related to the Navajos of the southwestern United States. Few full-blooded descendants of these tribes are living today, Prof. Wenger said, but many of their artifacts are being discovered and preserved in museums.

For their service the students will leave Managua and move into the hinterlands. Unsalaried service projects anticipated for them are: 4-H Club work with the extension service of the Ministry of Agriculture, assistance in elementary schools, literacy work, assisting teams under the Ministry of Health in administering polio vaccinations, and assisting victims displaced by the recent eruption of Cerro Negro volcano.

Commencement Set For April

Goshen College's 71st annual commencement events are set for the weekend of April 13.

The April date marks the first time in the school's history that commencement was held that month. The change from the traditional June date is due to the inauguration of the Goshen Plan and the trimester calendar.

Commencement weekend will include the class program and candlelighting service for the senior nurses, a choir program which will be the performance of St. Matthew's Passion, and the traditional baccalaureate and commencement. Speakers have not yet been named for the major addresses.

Alumni day and the traditional alumni reunions and alumni annual banquet are set for Saturday, June 7, at the time of the 75th Anniversary Convocation. A full day of activities for alumni is planned for that weekend.

Special Campus Events Listed For Second Half of 75th Year

The calendar of events for the last half of GC's 75th year includes many special speakers, artists, and cultural attractions.

The first half of the year included a similar, impressive list of events. Among them were the address by Dr. Andrew W. Cordier, acting president of Columbia University at the time of dedication of the new library and a special "Creativity and the Establishment" focus at Homecoming. An article on Page 2 reviews some of the addresses and the music programs that were given last fall.

Thirty-one students from around the world are attending Goshen College this year in the School's international student program.

Fourteen students are new and 17 have returned to the campus to continue their studies. In addition, 55 students from Canada have enrolled at Goshen College this year.

Denmark, Germany, Norway and Yugoslavia are the European countries represented; African students come from Tanzania and Kenya. From the western hemisphere students have come from Panama, Uruguay, Haiti, Jamaica, Puerto Rico and Honduras.

Other students' homelands are Jordan, Japan, Vietnam, Iran, Korea, Taiwan, Cyprus and Okinawa.

The students are taking a variety of courses. Three have enrolled in nursing; several are studying science and one is in pre-medicine. Others are taking education, mathematics, social sciences, languages, music and home economics. One student is in the seminary.

J. Robert Kreider, director of college relations, points out that the program for international students, because of its high cost, cannot be financed completely from the annual quota allocations for GC from congregation budgets and offerings.

It has been most rewarding, he said, to receive gifts from a number of Sunday-school classes, men's fellowships, and women's groups, which recognize the importance of helping educate international students. These gifts are "plus" gifts, above and beyond the quota for GC in their congregation budget. They are designated for the international student aid fund and are either in general support of the program or to help specific students in whom they have interest.

The international student program began in 1945. Its significance lies not only in preparing students who come from overseas, many of whom return to their homelands for service, but also in making possible an enlarged world outlook for the entire student body.

Raise Funds for Biafra

Students and faculty have raised over $3,800 for starving Biafrans through donations, cafeteria fasts, faculty wives' bake sale, and a benefit concert.

A special group set up by the College Community Government senate, which represents students, faculty, administration, and staff, rallied the campus to action late last fall after learning that over a million persons have died either from starvation or protein deficiency in Nigeria since the outbreak of the war almost two years ago.

Of the sum so far collected, about $1200 was sent to Mennonite Central Committee to help cover the expenses of Dr. Atlee Beechy on an investigation trip to Biafra this month.

According to Dr. Beechy, there is food in warehouses at various points in federal controlled territory of Nigeria and on nearby islands, but the problem is lack of air transportation to move the food where it is needed. Further, the real needs of the country have not yet reached their peaks.

Four to eight students have shown interest in going to Nigeria and Biafra in the very near future under the auspices of MCC to help ease some of the needs there. Another 15 to 20 students are interested in going in the summer or fall of 1969.

Dr. Wallace Shellenberger, a native of Goshen and a medical missionary who had been operating a hospital in Biafra until recently, spoke at the College and returned to Biafra with Dr. Beechy to investigate relief needs.

School for Ministers Set for Feb. 4-21

Dr. J. C. Wenger, director of the 1969 School for Ministers, has announced eight courses for the three-week period, Feb. 4-21.

Sponsored by the Goshen College Biblical Seminary, the school is conducted Tuesdays through Fridays in the three weeks.

The tentative list of courses and instructors is: Doctrinal Preaching, by Dr. Erland Waltner; Expository Preaching, by Dr. Howard H. Charles; Minor Prophets, by Prof. Stanley C. Shenk; Fourth Gospel, by Dr. William Klassen; Equipping the Saints, by Prof. Harold E. Bauman; Sattler Legacy, by Dr. John H. Yoder; Pastors' Seminar, by Dr. Paul M. Miller, and Contemporary Theology, by Dr. J. C. Wenger.

The course, Equipping the Saints, will center in the nature of the church as involving every member in its total task and how to kindle this vision in the local congregation. Sattler Legacy will be a study of the rich doctrinal contributions attributed to the pen of Michael Sattler, the 1527 martyr. Pastors' Seminar will give conferees the chance to discuss types of problems they encounter in the work of the church.

The week of February 10, ministers will be able to attend a colloquium sponsored by the Office of Experiments in Christian Higher Education. Dr. Peter Bertocci, of Boston University; Dr. Dale Brown, of Bethany Theological Seminary; and Dr. William H. Grant, of Michigan State University, will be the special speakers on topics centering in "Values and Higher Education" on February 12, 13, and 14. General theme for the colloquium is "Toward an Understanding of Freedom."

As usual, expenses are held to a minimum in appreciation for the service the ministers are giving to their churches.

Ministers interested in attending are requested to write in advance of their intended arrival and whether the Seminary should arrange housing for them.

Prospective Students to Be Hosted on Campus

March 21-22 and June 14-21 are the dates for special gatherings on campus for prospective college students.

But, according to John M. Zook, associate director of admissions, young persons and their fathers and mothers, or groups of young persons with their MYF sponsors or church leaders, are welcome on campus at any time for tours and interviews.

He added, "It is often helpful for visitors to write or phone in advance so that tours, housing, meals, and other arrangements, as necessary, can be made."

March 21-22 are the dates for the annual spring Campus Open House, specially designed for high school seniors and high school graduates seriously interested in college. Among the activities will be "Nurse for a Day" for those wishing to explore nursing as a profession; vocational interest groups, conferences with college professors, and a locker-room session with one of GC's coaches for fellows interested in athletics.

June 14-21 is the time for College Preview and Summer Music Week. College Preview, for high school juniors (will be seniors next fall), brings young persons together from the East and Midwest for a week of serious study in each person's choice of several workshops. Social events, worship, tours, and an off-campus gathering at a nearby state park or recreation area are included in the calendar to make the week fast moving, stimulating, and delightful.

Summer Music Week, open not only to juniors but also to high school sophomores and seniors, attracts young persons with interests in choral or instrumental music. The week of intensive study in applied music as well as music theory is capped by a special public performance in Union Auditorium.

Prospective students, fathers or mothers, or youth leaders desiring additional information about campus events are warmly invited to write to Mr. John M. Zook.

National Experts Teach

Sr. Frank Gomez, Costa Rica Centro Cultural director, explains pre-Columbian pottery to "SST-ers" Pat Wyse (left) and Bev Bontrager (right). National experts lecture on 25 to 30 subjects.

Gather for Worship

Guadeloupe "SST-ers" gather at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Smucker for Sunday worship. Ready to begin, this service included a sermonette by a student and guitar-accompanied singing.

At Day Care Nursery

Joyce Stahly (foreground), sophomore from Morton, Ill., was a helper at one of the preschool day nurseries in Guadeloupe for the service portion of the Study-Service Trimester abroad last fall. Other students were involved at a children's home, in social work, at a home economics school, and at the West Indies Mission.

At U. of Costa Rica

Dr. J. Daniel Hess, faculty leader of the "SST" unit in Costa Rica, examines a sea shell with Patsy Hylton, senior from New York City, at the National Museum at the University of Costa Rica. Miss Hylton helped organize and compile biological materials, books, and magazine articles for the library. Other students in Costa Rica accepted unsalaried assignments in a crafts and recreation program for patients at a large hospital, at a home for delinquents, at a day care center for children of working mothers, in teaching English, in assisting the Boy Scouts, and in agricultural experimentation and extension work.

Live in Homes

Greg Hershberger (third from left), sophomore from Milford, Neb., lived with the Francois family, of Abymes, 4 km. (about 2 1/2 miles) from Pointe-a-Pitre, where Dr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Smucker, faculty leaders, lived. Left to right: M. Maurice Francois, Mlle. Christian, Mr. Hershberger, Mdme. Francois, Mlle. Loretta, Yonn, and Allan. In "SST" the student boards and rooms with a family, becomes its "American son" (or daughter) and takes part in its social and recreational activities. Family living is a great help to a student learning the country's language.

SCA Service Reaches Out

Among SCA projects are helping families paint their homes. Ray Funk, SCA president, is pictured here.

Members of the Student Christian Association are taking part in projects in Goshen and Elkhart, South Bend, Fort Wayne, and Chicago this year to demonstrate Christian concern.

Students working at the Lighthouse, of East Goshen, and in Elkhart provide club activities for boys and girls of various ages. Volunteers give tutorial help to pupils from kindergarten through high school in desperate academic need.

Also in Elkhart, students are working with Church Community Services to assist families in light construction work, painting, and clean-up to bring their homes up to standard.

SCA is also working with the Housing Corporation in Fort Wayne, an organization of concerned blacks and whites which buys houses from slum-lords and, with volunteer help, fixes them up and resells them to local residents at cost.

In other activities, SCA members have been friends to Mexican-American laborers and teenagers in Goshen and have helped them learn to read and speak English. Teams of students have presented programs at churches; one Gospel team visited Pennsylvania and Ohio churches during Christmas recess. Club activities with a group of grade-school youngsters in Chicago are also being carried on by SCA.

April 14 Commencement To Honor 301 Seniors

Three hundred one seniors will take part in graduation ceremonies at Goshen College's 71st annual commencement Monday morning, April 14, in the Union Auditorium.

Dr. William Spoelhof, president of Calvin College, of Grand Rapids, Mich., will deliver the commencement address. After receiving the M.A. degree in 1937 and the Ph.D. degree in 1946, both from the University of Michigan, Dr. Spoelhof became the chief executive officer of Calvin College in 1951.

The complete weekend schedule is:

This is the first year in the school's history that commencement is set for April. The change from the traditional June date is due to the new trimester calendar which went into effect last fall. Future commencement weekends are planned for April, at the end of the winter trimester.

Commencement weekend traditionally also included a number of activities for alumni. This year these activities are set for Saturday, June 7, on the occasion of the 75th Anniversary Convocation and the dedication of the Harold and Thelma Schrock Plaza. An article elsewhere on this page gives more detail on events planned for June 6 and 7.

Three Regional Clubs Set Spring Meetings

Three regional clubs of the Alumni Association have planned spring meetings.

Dr. Robert Ebersole '48, president of the Northwestern Ohio club, has announced a dinner meeting for 6:30 p.m. Saturday, March 22, at Zion Mennonite Church, of Archbold, Ohio. A special feature of the program will be a student string quartet from the college.

Dr. Atlee Beechy will be the speaker at the dinner meeting of the Eastern Pennsylvania club at 6:30 p.m., on Saturday, April 19, at Meadow Hills Restaurant, of Lancaster. In charge of local arrangements is Dr. James E. Fricke '61, president of the club.

A meeting of alumni in Ohio's Holmes and Tuscarawas counties is planned for late April, according to regional club president Dr. Maurice Mullet '59.

Alumni in the regions where meetings are sponsored will receive invitations and more information near the time of the meeting.

With One Game Left, Maple Leafs Sport 15-5 Season

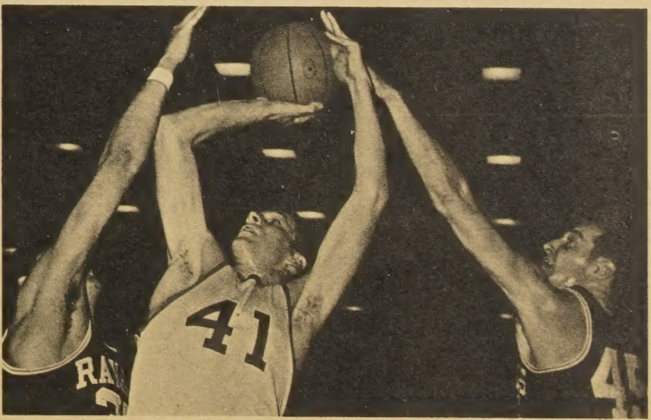
The Maple Leafs, with one game to go as this went to press, sported a 15-5 record for Coach Fred Litwiller's inaugural season, despite unfortunate ankle injuries and illness due to the flu.

Keith Springer, a 6-4 senior forward from Saybrook, Ill., and a 1968 All-Indiana Small College NAIA winner, continued his outstanding performance on the hardwood this season.

He has accumulated more than 1500 points in his four years of play at GC — 500 more than any other player in GC's history. Each year he has always been one of GC's outstanding rebounders.

Springer and senior Bob Cross, a valuable floor leader and play maker, were extremely valuable to this year's squad. Others to be missed next season will be George Liechty, John Histand, and Art Cosgrove.

Players from this year's first 10 returning to the varsity for the '69-'70 season will be veterans Maurice Miller, center; Bob Zuercher, guard; Roger Springer, forward; Lyle Gaff, center; and Ken Pletcher, guard.



MAURICE MILLER (41), a 6-4 sophomore from Dearborn Heights, Mich., wasn't stopped from making 25 points and hauling in 17 rebounds against the Anderson Ravens on Jan. 10. He is the leading rebounder for the Maple Leafs and has averaged 12.5 rebounds a game.

Roger Springer broke GC's individual single game scoring record of 43 points, set last year, by dropping 44 points through the hoop last month when GC walloped Grace 109-93. Roger's phenomenal field goal percentage was .560 in 302 attempts, with one game to go.

Zuercher, a good defensive player and fine ball handler, with his accurate aim hit a percentage of .833 in 42 attempts from the freethrow line and a percentage of .514 in 185 attempts from the field, with one game to go.

Class Agents Across Nation Begin Work on 1969 Fund

Forty-seven alumni — representing each of the classes 1922 through 1968 — have accepted the challenge to rally their classmates to surpass the 1969 Alumni Annual Fund goal.

As this went to press, agents for classes earlier than 1922 were still being confirmed.

Working from their homes in 14 states and in Ontario, the class agents have been writing letters asking that each alumnus do his part.

The goal is $100,000 in gifts for designated or unrestricted use, plus $33,000 for endowment. Altogether, the 1969 Alumni Annual Fund goal is set at $133,000 which is $29,565 more than alumni gave last year.

Gordon Yoder '51, an Elkhart, Ind., banker, is national chairman of this year's effort. He and the Annual Fund Committee of the Alumni Association are responsible for the policies and procedures of the '69 Fund.

On the committee are Harold E. Hartzler '56, Lloyd E. Hartzler '38, Clifford P. Martin '27, Mrs. Roger (Earlene Cravener) Nofziger '60, Gordon Yoder '51, and Larry R. Yoder '59.

Below is the list of class agents and the number of alumni in each class.

To be counted in the 1969 Alumni Fund, gifts must be received by June 30.

Why Goshen College?

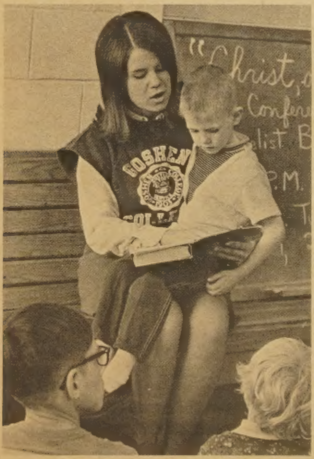
The most searching question one can ask about any college is what kind of graduate does it hope to produce? Once that question is answered one can judge how well the faculty, the curriculum, the campus, or the student activities are suited to the purpose — for colleges differ in what they hope to do.

One of the earliest leaders of Goshen College had quite a specific graduate in mind. In the closing words of his inaugural address, Pres. N. E. Byers, the College's first president, said the aim of the College would be to train men and women for true living.

He said, "Let us then all cooperate to develop and maintain an institution which shall serve the Church and the community in raising up young men and women directed toward the end of true service. Let our motto be, 'Culture for Service.'"

In simple language, combining the highest ideals and aspirations with the practical arts and skills, the Goshen motto includes the best in all of them; not culture for its own sake, nor service without worthwhile ends and values, but Culture for Service.

In the classroom, on the campus, in extracurricular activities, in inter-collegiate contacts, the motto always has meant "Christian Culture for Christian Service." "Christian Service" has come to mean, more and more, "Christian" in the original Swiss Brethren sense of discipleship, of implicit obedience to Jesus Christ and His church and living in the spirit of His teaching.



SCA STORY HOUR — Miss Kendra Crist, a junior from Hellam, Pa., reads to youngsters at the East Goshen Lighthouse.

To carry out such a motto on a college campus day by day is hard work. It requires able students and an able faculty. Both groups must be ambitious, venturesome, and ready for the demanding kind of learning experience that "Culture for Service" calls for.

Dr. Paul E. Mininger, president of Goshen College, said in a recent report to the Board of Overseers, "In an academic climate where practically all faculty are members of the Mennonite Church and where 70 per cent of the students are likewise members, we have a situation which offers many advantages in the development of a curriculum which serves as a vital force in the mission of the church. In the first place, the faculty view their appointment to Goshen College as a lifetime commitment in the service of the church and not as a stepping stone to a 'better' job. What happens in the development of the course of studies is, therefore, not of peripheral importance to these persons. Rather, it is a series of issues on which they have staked their very lives. This creates a climate of urgency and relevance that is the envy of many other institutions of higher education in the United States."

In the Vanguard

Goshen College has built and continues to build its teaching methods and its curriculum to fulfill its aim to produce a unique kind of graduate. Virtually all of this building has placed Goshen College in the vanguard of higher education institutions in the United States and Canada. As a result, Goshen College occupies a position of leadership among the church-related colleges of the Midwest.

Among those programs which have earned Goshen College a place in the forefront of other institutions are:

The Mennonite Quarterly Review was founded by the Mennonite Historical Society as a journal devoted to Mennonite history, thought, life, and current affairs. Today, it is widely recognized as one of the foremost church history periodicals in North America. The Mennonite Historical Society, founded in 1924 for the promotion of Mennonite historical research and publication, has developed a definitive, unusually rich library collection of volumes dealing with the Anabaptist-Mennonite brotherhood in all countries and covering the entire period since 1525 to the present. Together, the library collection and the publication of a scholarly journal by a college as small as Goshen clearly put it in the forefront of liberal arts colleges.

1938

Semimicro technique in laboratory work in analytical chemistry was introduced by Dr. Glen R. Miller, who developed procedures for making the required smaller types of laboratory glassware and apparatus as well as the laboratory formulas. The new technique replaced the older experimental method of using large quantities of chemicals and the conventional large pieces of apparatus. The semimicro technique was adopted in the freshman chemistry course in 1955. Later in the '50's, the conventional technique used in organic chemistry was scaled down and semimicro analysis applied. Goshen College was in the forefront of colleges and universities in using semimicro technique at a time when suitable laboratory glassware and apparatus were not yet on the market and appropriate lab manuals were virtually nonexistent.

Goshen College adopted a general education program — namely, a series of courses which should be taken by all candidates for degrees, regardless of major, professional field, or vocational career. The adoption of such a program clearly put Goshen College ahead of the schools across the nation by some five to ten years, for it was not until the mid-1940's that the basic documents (the McConnell Committee Report, 1944; the Harvard Report, 1945; and the Report of Pres. Truman's Commission on Higher Education, 1947) were published that influenced a widespread adoption of general education.

collegiate division of nursing in the Mennonite Church and the first such division of nursing at a liberal arts college in Indiana. Today, it is one of only 49 four-year liberal arts colleges across the nation to offer preparation for professional nursing. The record of the 357 graduates of GC's division of nursing has been outstanding — 350 passed the state board exams for licensure on their first attempt.

NURSING — Goshen College, in 1950, set up the first collegiate nursing program in the Mennonite Church.

Undergraduate student teaching fellows — all seniors — were used as discussion leaders in courses with large enrollments. The journal of the Association of American Colleges, Liberal Education, called it, "A daring experiment whose evident success points to one way in which colleges might mitigate the effects of the impending teacher shortage." For those chosen to be senior teaching fellows, the experience tended to stimulate interest in college teaching as a career. A surprising number (55 per cent) of the fellows are college or university professors today, or are in preparation to teach on that level.

1957

The undergraduate preprofessional social work program was launched at Goshen College under the direction of Dr. Lester Glick. Formerly, preparation for social work was reserved for the graduate school. GC's program has been one of the first in North America and has served as a model for many liberal arts colleges and universities. After developing the program at GC, Dr. Glick drew upon the GC experience to organize workshops for undergraduate college teachers of social work.

1959

The laboratory kindergarten was begun. It was the first of any at liberal arts colleges in Indiana and among the first of such ventures in the setting up of a child-study center by liberal arts colleges of Goshen's size in the nation. Among the purposes of the kindergarten are the provision of laboratory experiences for students aiming for a wide variety of careers, including schoolteaching, nursing, home economics, psychology, and social work.

1960

The professional teaching semester was inaugurated as a greatly streamlined program for persons preparing to teach in elementary schools. The special semester of studies in the senior year combined the theory, originally taught in nine methods courses, with the student teaching assignment. The new program emphasized curriculum workshops in social studies, science, arithmetic, language arts, and evaluation. Goshen College was in the forefront in the nation in the early 1960's to initiate the professional sequence, and a number of schools have patterned their program after it.

1966

An Office of Experiments in Christian Higher Education was set up at Goshen College to study and develop projects through which a college can effectively influence the moral and religious values of students. Two projects — moral and spiritual values in general education, and moral and spiritual values through participation in voluntary community service — have been proposed; the former is currently being carried out to make the general education program more effective in communicating the Christian faith and ethic. The program of Experiments, currently one of the most intensive of any known in North America, has been funded by an Indianapolis-based foundation, Lilly Endowment, Inc., which has deep interest in the values that many persons in higher education have upheld and wish to strengthen — the concepts of basic Christian commitment and discipleship, caring for persons, integrity, stewardship, personal and social responsibility, vocation, and Christian witness and service.

1968

The Goshen Plan was inaugurated and with it the Study-Service Trimester was launched. The "SST" makes available to every student experiences in a foreign culture for the purpose of increasing his understanding of other nations and other peoples. Goshen College is the only known North American college which has a large proportion of its students and faculty in locations outside the country in an extensive ongoing program year round. The 14-week trimester abroad is believed to be unique because it combines seven weeks of study with seven weeks of service, and gives college credit for successful completion of both parts. Further, the College is believed to be the only one making successful completion of an international education experience combining study and service a requirement for graduation. The program is also special in that students do not live together as a group in a dormitory at each location; rather each student lives with a host family and commutes from this home to study and service activities.

Very few colleges have had the opportunity to be in the vanguard of higher education as has Goshen College. In the first 75 years Goshen College has made a signal beginning, but the very stature of its program and of the College itself will continue to be determined as further plans and programs unfold and as its graduates exert their influence in accomplishing important goals for their fellowmen in the Christian Church and around the world.

KULP HALL — Named in remembrance of Lewis Kulp, it was the third building on campus when completed in 1906.

Chronology

1894

The Elkhart Institute of Science, Industry and the Arts, a private school, was founded in the city of Elkhart by Dr. Henry A. Mumaw (1850-1908), a member of the Prairie Street Mennonite Church.

1898

A local nine-member board, all members of the Mennonite Church, bought Dr. Mumaw's interest in the school and took over the management of the Elkhart Institute Association.

1901

To secure a wider representation and a larger constituency, the board of the Elkhart Institute Association was increased from nine to 25 members elected from various Mennonite Conference districts in the United States and Canada.

1903

The Elkhart Institute was moved to Goshen and was renamed Goshen College. N. E. Byers, who had been principal of the Institute since 1898, became the first president of Goshen College. At this time the school began to offer two years of college work.

1905

The Board of Trustees of Elkhart Institute turned over its property to the Mennonite Board of Education, which provided for general church supervision and support.

1909

A full four-year college course leading to the bachelor's degree was inaugurated.

1910

The first B.A. degrees were conferred.

1913

J. E. Hartzler was named second president of Goshen College. Under his administration Science Hall was built and the curriculum extended. He served until 1918.

1918

Between 1918 and 1923 Goshen had no fewer than four presidents: George J. Lapp, 1918-19; H. F. Reist, 1919-20; I. R. Detweiler, 1920-22; and Daniel Kauffman, 1922-23. It appeared to many persons that the experiment in Mennonite education was doomed to end in failure.

1923

The darkest year of Goshen's history had arrived. The school was closed for a year so that a completely new start could be made and reorganization could be provided for. . . . S. C. Yoder, a bishop and churchman from Kalona, Iowa, was named president and asked to lead in the reorganization. He held the chief executive post 17 years. Widely respected throughout the church as a preacher and evangelist, he recovered some of the confidence of the earlier years. He was able to attract a dedicated faculty, highly trained and in full sympathy with the aims of the Mennonite Church. Among the persons who came to Goshen at his request were Noah Oyer, C. L. Graber, H. S. Bender, S. W. Witmer, and Silas Hertzler. In the next few years other pioneer faculty members joined their ranks. Among them were John S. Umble, Guy F. Hershberger, Glen R. Miller, Olive G. Wyse, and Willard H. Smith.

1931

Harold S. Bender was named the first dean of the Bible school at Goshen College. The undergraduate Bible school grew into the Mennonite Church's first graduate-level seminary.

1934

The first Th.B. (Bachelor of Theology) degrees were conferred.

1940

Dr. S. C. Yoder retired from the presidency. The school was on a sound financial footing. The confidence of the church had been restored and a constructive relationship with it had been established. Well-trained and dedicated faculty had been secured. . . . Dr. Ernest E. Miller was inaugurated eighth president of Goshen College. He was president 14 years.

1941

The college received accreditation by the North Central Association.

1946

The international student program was begun by inviting a few European students to study at the school. . . . The Bible School was authorized to become the Goshen College Biblical Seminary.

1947

The first B.D. degrees were conferred. The course of studies leading to that degree requires three years graduate Bible study beyond four years of college.

1950

The Division of Nursing was begun. It has grown to be a major part of the college's total program.

1954

Dr. E. E. Miller retires from the presidency. Dr. Paul E. Mininger is inaugurated as the ninth president. Since 1954 enrollment has grown from 540 full-time students to slightly more than double that number, 1154 in fall, 1968. . . . The course of studies to prepare teachers for elementary and secondary schools was accredited by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education.

1955

The M.R.E. (Master of Religious Education) degree was established as a graduate degree requiring two years of study with a major in Christian education.

1958

The Goshen College Biblical Seminary receives full accreditation from the American Association of Theological Schools.

SCHROCK PLAZA — A campus beauty spot, it features a pool and fountain in a setting of benches, trees, and lights.

1960

A three-year capital expansion program was completed. Built in the years 1958-60 were the Seminary Building, the Church-Chapel, the C. Z. Yoder Residence Hall, and the Maintenance Building.

1968

Goshen College launched the Goshen Plan, the essential feature of which is the unique Study-Service Trimester.

1969

The College completes a five-year development program in which Clayton Kratz Residence Hall, Orie O. Miller Residence Hall, the Harold and Wilma Good Library, and the Harold and Thelma Schrock Plaza were built. . . . Goshen College completes 75 years of service to the Mennonite Church, to its Northern Indiana community, and to its many friends.

The Campus

The Goshen College campus includes 135 acres and 19 buildings on the south edge of Goshen. The plant assets are valued at $6,018,600.

In the early 1960's Goshen College adopted a blueprint for growth. Site planners and landscape architects for campus development and expansion are Johnson, Johnson and Roy, of Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Residence Halls: Seven buildings accommodate a total of 878 students. The majority of the rooms are for double occupancy. A lounge is provided in each hall for the use of residents. Three buildings on the east campus — C. Z. Yoder Residence Hall, Clayton Kratz Residence Hall, and Orie O. Miller Residence Hall — comprise a complex for residential living which is being studied with the view for similar complexes in the future.

Classroom and Laboratory Buildings: The Administration Building, Science Hall, Arts Building, and Seminary Building are assigned to the various departments of the college and provide lecture rooms, laboratories, and offices for faculty and administration.

Service Buildings: The Maintenance Building, expanded in 1969, and the Heating Plant, renovated and expanded in 1964, house the office and work areas of the physical plant department.

Church-Chapel: Built in 1959, this building houses a 1200-seat sanctuary, classrooms and offices of the teacher education division, and the laboratory kindergarten. A pipe organ, the gift of Mrs. Fannie B. Severson '12 in memory of her father, the late Jacob Rupp, is to be installed in the main sanctuary.

College Union: Built in 1949, the Union houses the indoor facilities of the physical education department, auditorium-gymnasium, snack shop, bookstore, post office, and radio station WGCS-FM.

SUMMER MUSIC WEEK — Some 50 high school musicians gather on campus every June for intensive study.

Good Library: Completed in 1967, the building was named in honor of the donors, Harold and Wilma Good, both graduates of Goshen College. The building houses the main stacks and carrels, art gallery, instructional materials center, teacher education division offices, and the Mennonite Historical Library.

Schrock Plaza: To be completed this spring, the strategically located plaza at the physical center of the campus is the gift of Harold and Thelma Schrock, both graduates of Goshen College. It includes a lighted pool and fountain, wood benches in a setting of locust and linden trees, and a large open area.

Health Center: Built in 1939, the center provides medical and nursing services to the campus community.

Memorial Library: Completed in 1940, this building is currently used for non-library purposes until plans for renovation are completed. It houses a large rehearsal room for choirs, orchestra, and drama groups; art studios; and offices of student publications.

Curriculum

It is the intention of Goshen College to provide students with a broad and liberal education and to provide an environment in which the student may develop the knowledge, skills, and values essential for living and serving as a Christian. The learning experiences at Goshen College are regarded not as ends in themselves but as a sound beginning for further intellectual and spiritual development.

In the light of these objectives,' all Goshen College students receive general education in English and speech, foreign language, fine arts, social science, mathematics, natural science, physical education, Bible and religion, psychology, and international studies.

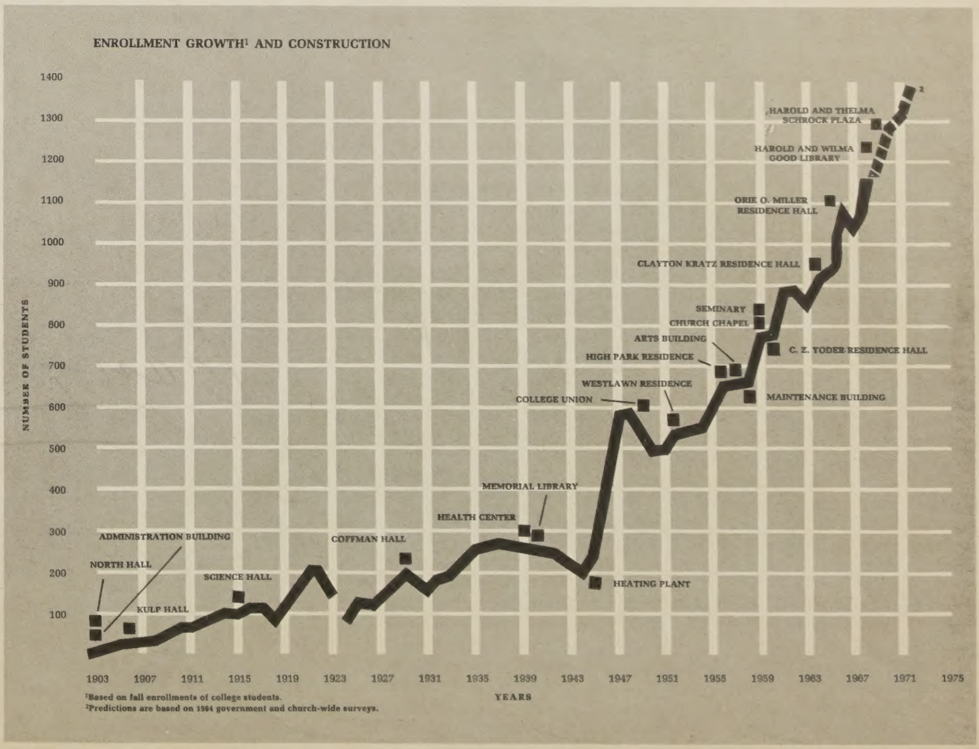
After the first two years, students may major in one of the following 26 fields: art, Bible, biology, business, chemistry, economics, elementary education, English, French, German, history, home economics, mathematics, music, natural science, physical education, physical science, physics, political science, psychology, religion, social science, sociology, social welfare, Spanish, and speech.

Education at Goshen also provides the preprofessional preparation required in such fields as medical technology, dietetics, engineering, medicine, ministry, x-ray technology, law, dentistry, and agriculture.

Faculty

Goshen College's unique program of Christian higher education demands a first-rate faculty and serious students. The teaching faculty have been granted graduate degrees from leading universities of the United States and Europe.

Although the doctorate is not of itself an assurance of high teaching ability, it is an impressive fact that 47 per cent of the teaching faculty have been granted



ENROLLMENT GROWTH[1] AND CONSTRUCTION

[1] Based on fall enrollments of college students.

[2] Predictions are based on 1964 government and church-wide surveys.

the doctoral degree. Thirteen are currently pursuing study toward the doctorate.

Forty-nine per cent of the teaching faculty have taught or worked overseas. They have brought a distinct "international service" dimension to the classroom. Because this large nucleus of teachers with overseas experience is centered at Goshen College, it was only natural for the school to launch the Study-Service Trimester program last fall. The faculty desired that students experience a foreign culture as part of their general education program and be exposed to some of the world's pressing social, education, physical, and spiritual needs.

The student to teaching faculty ratio is 17 to 1 or lower, and is an indication that Goshen College wishes to assure each student adequate personal guidance from his teachers.

Scholarships and Grants

The experience of Goshen College and of many colleges underscores the fact that liberal arts students are just as likely to need scholarship aid as any other student. Further, Goshen College believes it is a mistake to limit Christian higher education to the economy's elite. The College is pledged to help all those who can profit from its program and who will become substantial citizens.

The amount of aid is determined by the student's need as shown on his application submitted through College Scholarship Service of Princeton, N. J.

Through the generosity of many donors, Goshen College's scholarships and grants program makes attendance possible for many outstanding young men and women of limited financial means.

For the 1968-69 school year, 370 students, or 32 per cent of the student body, received gift aid. Scholarships and grants from College funds totaled $50,400. In addition to this amount, scholarships and grants from a variety of private and governmental sources totaled $250,400. Tuition discounts to ministers and missionaries totaled $7,600.

Donors of scholarship funds are encouraged to make unrestricted scholarship gifts available for general use by the College. Gift aids are in addition to a subsidy which Goshen College provides to every full-time student every school year to make his education possible. In the current year, this subsidy amounted to $540 a student and was made possible from the generosity of the Mennonite Church, alumni, business and industry, and friends.

Self Help

Goshen College is making available to students increasing amounts of loan funds. Loans are made from funds given the College and by arrangements with a number of organizations.

COLLEGIANS — They have a chance to ponder, to contemplate, to find answers to new questions and questions that have no answers.

PREPARATION — Small liberal arts colleges, like GC, have always furnished a high proportion of the nation's scientists, engineers, and medical doctors.

In the school year, 1968-69, 550 students received loans totaling $485,000, which were certified and approved by Goshen College. Sources of the loans included funds from the College, Federal Government, and private lending institutions.

For students who are willing to work for their education, Goshen College administers an employment program. In the current school year, 300 students accepted employment and will receive a total of $75,000 in wages from the College plus $25,000 under the Federal College Work-Study Program.

Goshen College's financial aid program to a student many times is a "package" which may include one, two, or all forms of aid: scholarship, loan, employment. In the current year, a total of $893,400 was made available to students to help them carry their costs of education.

Enrollment

Goshen is a college home for young persons of the Mennonite Church, sons and daughters of alumni, students from its Northern Indiana community, and other persons who share its basic purpose.

Goshen College has been fortunate in being able to attract students of high ability. In the fall, 1968, entering freshman class, 29 per cent of the 313 students ranked in the top 10 per cent of their high school graduating class. Fifty-six per cent of the students ranked in the top one-fourth of their high school class; 86 per cent ranked in the top half.

The mean scores of those who submitted CEEB Scholastic Aptitude Test Scores were: men — 490.6 (verbal), 546.4 (math); women — 483.3 (verbal), 499.9 (math).

According to the College Scholarship Service, which judges financial need of students who apply for aid, Goshen College was able to meet 98 per cent of the need of those applicants who requested aid.

This year's freshmen represented 26 states, Canada, and eight overseas countries. The majority of the freshmen came from Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Illinois, and New York.

Seventy-three per cent of the freshmen came from the Mennonite Church. Twenty-five other donominations were also represented, including Methodist, Baptist, Lutheran, and the Brethren.

Alumni Club Activity

Alumni regional clubs have been active in Ohio, Illinois, and Indiana this spring.

On May 3 the Holmes and Tuscarawas Counties' Club met at the Dutchman's Restaurant, of Walnut Creek, Ohio, to hear students Judy Beechy and Greg Hershberger describe their Study-Service Trimester experience in Guadeloupe. Forty-five alumni were present.

Presiding was Dr. Daniel J. Miller '61. Elected were Roy Schlabach '62, president; Vernon Miller '37, vice-president; and Mrs. Paul (Carol June Hostetler) '53 Roth, secretary-treasurer.

Chicago area alumni met May 23 at the apartment of Miss Joan Williams '61 in the John Hancock Building to hear Dr. Atlee Beechy speak on "Campus Unrest." A social hour followed the address.

A nucleus of 14 couples from Elkhart County will meet June 2 with the alumni relations committee appointed by the executive board of the Alumni Association. Purpose of the dinner meeting, set for the Alumni Memorial Dining Room on the GC campus, is to begin planning for regional club activity in Elkhart County. Historic Building Burns This Spring

Fire Destroys North Hall

North Hall, situated on the northwest corner of Ninth Street and College Avenue, burned to the ground Thursday morning, April 10. The aging two-story frame building was slated to be razed sometime this summer.

At the time of the fire, the building was vacant. The Spouter Inn, a coffee house type activity for students, was located on the first floor. Some student art work used to decorate the coffee house and an old piano were the only contents in the building.

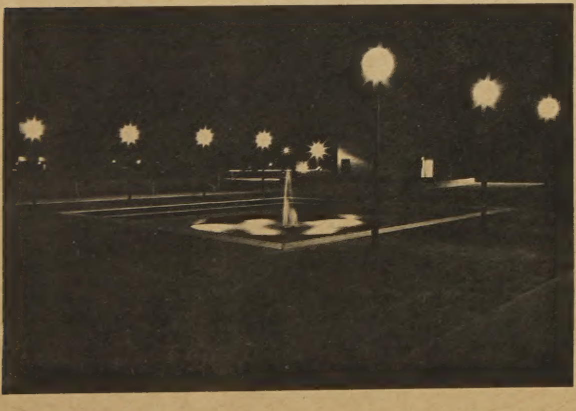
Twenty-two men, including 12 off-duty firemen, were dispatched to the scene by the Goshen Fire Department. Flames quickly spread through the wooden 66-year-old building. In less than an hour's time the roof and sides had caved in.

North Hall, formerly known as East Hall when it was built near the Administration Building, was the first completed building on the campus. Over the years it was used as a women's residence hall, housing for faculty families and married students, a men's residence hall, and as a work area for art students.

Long-range plans for the corner where the building stood are indefinite.

Seniors Welcomed By Alumni

(Left) Frank Ulrich '55, center, Alumni Association president, welcomed the 1969 seniors to the Association at a banquet in Union Auditorium March 22. Left to right are Dr. Larry Beechy '57, Goshen, Ind., Association president-elect; James B. Styer, senior class president; Mr. Ulrich; Miss Marianne Mellinger, junior class secretary; and John J. Hostetler '51, emcee. (Right) Among the 400 guests were (l. to r.) John Davidson, Elkhart, Ind., Calvin Britsch, Archbold, Ohio, seniors; Miss Sharon Klingelsmith, Akron, N.Y., Miss Mary Kay Wade, Sterling, Ill., and Miss Kendra Crist, Hellam, Pa., juniors; Maurice Miller, sophomore, Dearborn Heights, Mich.; and Miss Mellinger. Juniors helped in preparations.

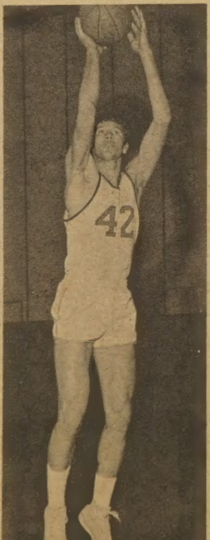


Schrock Plaza Inviting by Night

Lighted by the fountain and the five incandescent lights in each of the eight round globes, Schrock Plaza by night is inviting to students and guests. The plaza is named in recognition of the generosity of the donors, Harold and Thelma H. Schrock, both graduates of the Class of 1937, who have given the plaza "to the glory of God." Walkways in the plaza connect the Church-Chapel, Good Library, and Union with academic buildings, residence halls, and the athletic field.

Time for Cleaning

The "dress" of the Ad Building underwent cleaning this spring when bricks were tuck-pointed and loose ones replaced.



Named by NAIA

(Left) Keith Springer '69 has been named to the NAIA All-District 21 basketball team for the second straight year. Known throughout Indiana for tearing up opponents' defenses, he poured in 1,531 points in his four-year career — 501 more than the former GC school record set by Jim Gingerich '66.

BULLETIN

May, 1969 Vol. LXIII. No. 4.

The "Alumni Newsletter" edition of the Goshen College Bulletin is intended for alumni, friends of the College, and parents of students.

HOMECOMING WEEKEND, October 24, 25, 26
Plan Now to Return to Campus

Among the special events will be the Lecture-Music drama, "Antigone," by Sophocles, to be performed by the Indiana University Players. Also, a soccer match: the Goshen College Maple Leafs vs. the Spring Arbor Blue Jays.

Homecoming 1969 is being planned by a special committee made up of three alumni, five faculty members, and six students. The committee was organized after the GC Community Government Senate and Pres. Mininger approved a special Homecoming Planning bill last January.

Ready to go to work, the committee is looking at a number of purposes for Homecoming 1969. One purpose would be to provide educationally worthwhile events, such as special seminars, for returning alumni and students; another would be to provide opportunities for fellowship among alumni and between alumni and students. A third is to cultivate a spirit of pride and loyalty in Goshen College.

Alumni with thoughts on Homecoming are invited to share them with John L. Frankenfield '68, director of alumni relations.

Seminary Board Organizes

The new Board of Overseers of the Goshen College Biblical Seminary met for the first time late last month to organize and to work toward the selection of a Seminary president.

A board of overseers separate from the College's Board of Overseers was approved at the meeting of the Mennonite Board of Education last April. The action came at the same time that the Mennonite Board of Education authorized Goshen College to move the Biblical Seminary to the campus of the Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries, in Elkhart.

Officers of the Seminary Board of Overseers are the Rev. Richard J. Yordy, Champaign, Ill., chairman; the Rev. Joseph S. Hertzler, Iowa City, Iowa, vice chairman; and the Rev. Donald E. Yoder, Phoenix, Ariz., secretary. Other members are Dr. Paul L. Conrad, Scottdale, Pa.; Mr. Clayton Eigsti, Morton, Ill.; the Rev. Nelson E. Kauffman, Elkhart, Ind.; Mr. James D. Kratz, Elkhart, Ind.; the Rev. John E. Lapp, Lansdale, Pa.; the Rev. Emerson L. McDowell, Unionville, Ont.; and the Rev. John H. Powell, of Wichita, Kan.

In attending to one of their first assignments—the appointment of a Seminary president—the board provided for a seven-member president selection committee. Named to the committee as the Bulletin goes to press are the Rev. Richard J. Yordy, elected by the Seminary Board of Overseers and asked to be chairman; the Rev. Harvey Bauman, Earlington, Pa., and Mr. Orrin Smucker, Plain City, Ohio, both elected by the Executive Board of the Mennonite Board of Education; Mr. James D. Kratz, also elected by the Seminary Board of Overseers; and the Rev. Ronald L. Kennel, Wellman, Iowa, pastor and alumnus of the Seminary. One person each is to be selected by the Goshen Seminary faculty

Dr. Mininger Resigns Presidency

Dr. Paul E. Mininger, president of Goshen College, submitted his resignation last month to the executive board of the Mennonite Board of Education and the college's Board of Overseers.

His resignation, which comes after 15 years of service in the office of college president, is to be effective January 1, 1970, if possible, but no later than July 1, 1970.

In a short joint statement by Dr. Paul M. Lederach, president of the Mennonite Board of Education, and the Rev. Richard Yordy, chairman of the Goshen College Board of Overseers, they said the two controlling bodies accepted the resignation and expressed appreciation for Dr. Mininger's leadership.

As Dr. Lederach and Mr. Yordy thanked Dr. Mininger for his devoted leadership, they pointed out the innovations in Christian higher education for which his administration has been known.

Educational Plan Inaugurated

Under Dr. Mininger the Goshen Plan was inaugurated and the Trimester of Study and Service was launched.

He was also responsible for the innovative program of studying and developing projects through which a college can effectively influence the moral and religious values of students.

Dr. Mininger's leadership was also vital to the development and growth of the graduate-level Biblical Seminary on the Goshen campus. He was instrumental in helping the seminary become a part of the Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries, of Elkhart, Indiana. He was also one who made it possible for the Seminaries to adopt a new academic program which is unique to the preparation of ministers in the free church tradition.

Other Innovations

Innovations in the governance of the college and the spiritual life of the campus were also credited to Dr. Mininger. The Goshen College Community Government Senate, to which representatives of students, faculty, and administration are elected, encourages student responsibility in community life, co-ordinates student activities, and provides opportunities for communication and cooperation among students and faculty. Campus Church has become a vital congregational experience demanding involvement and responsibility by students in their spiritual affairs.

Under Dr. Mininger the President's Forum was set up. It provided for periodic face-to-face interchange with students in informal surroundings.

Dr. Mininger also set up the Goshen College Counselors and Pastors program to carry out further two-way communication between the Mennonite Church and the college. He also set up the President's Advisory Board, which interprets the purposes of the college to the community and the community to the college, and helps in securing needed capital from Northern Indiana.

Also, Dr. Mininger was credited for the launching of the undergraduate program for social workers, which has been recognized as a model by other undergraduate colleges and universities. Three major development and campus improvement programs, in which eight buildings were added to the campus, were successfully completed under his direction.

Time for a Younger Man

Dr. Mininger, 61, in his letter of resignation pointed out that he has already served as president twice as long as he had originally intended.

He said, "I believe the time has come for a younger man to lead the college in its next phase of development."

He added, "I am also looking forward to a number of productive years in less strenuous activity than is required today of a college president.

"And, I have the clear conviction that now is the time for me to terminate my work as president and for someone else to take over the responsibility of leadership."

Future Plans Unclear

Dr. Mininger, who was professor of Christian education before he was appointed president, continues to have tenure as a member of the teaching faculty. He joined the faculty in 1937.

Whether he teaches at Goshen College or accepts a post elsewhere is unclear, he said.

In addition to his responsibilities at the college, he has held or continues to hold leadership positions in the Independent Colleges and Universities of Indiana, Associated Colleges of Indiana, Council of Mennonite Colleges, the denomination-wide Commission for Christian Education, Mennonite Mental Health Services, Inc., the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities, the Mennonite General Conference, and the Indiana-Michigan Mennonite Conference. He is also a member of the board of the United Health Foundation of Elkhart County.

Dr. Mininger's undergraduate education was at Goshen College. His graduate degrees are from Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary and the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Lederach and Mr. Yordy said the Mennonite Board of Education and the Board of Overseers have taken steps to appoint members to a presidential selection committee and that the group will begin working aggressively in the near future to appoint Dr. Mininger's successor.

Named to the committee as this went to press are the Rev. Peter Wiebe, of Hesston, Kan., elected by the executive board of the Mennonite Board of Education; Mr. Wilbert Shenk, of Elkhart, elected by the college's Board of Overseers; Mr. Charles W. Ainlay, chairman of the President's Advisory Board of Goshen College; and Dean Carl Kreider, who will serve as chairman of the committee.

Three other persons will also be appointed to the committee. One person each will be selected by the faculty, students, and alumni.

75th Anniversary Goal of $3,500,000 Surpassed

The five-year 75th Anniversary goal, within reach at the time of the 75th Anniversary Convocation June 7, was surpassed by the end of the 1968-69 academic year.

The goal of $3,500,000 was exceeded by $10,360.52 when the books were closed on June 30.

Among the achievements of the five-year development program were the building of Clayton Kratz Residence Hall, Orie O. Miller Residence Hall, Harold and Wilma Good Library, Schrock Plaza, and an addition to the maintenance building.

The ground and first floors of the Administration Building underwent a major renovation, as did the serving facilities of the Alumni Memorial Dining Room. In the Union Building, the bookstore, snack shop, and post office were enlarged. In the area of campus improvement, a number of parking lots were cleared and surfaced, sidewalks were built, and landscaping for the building projects was completed.

In addition to the new construction, sums of money went toward faculty improvement, purchase of books and periodicals, financial aid to students, and for educational equipment and furnishings.

President Mininger said, "My first response is one of gratitude. I am pleased with the overall progress the school has made in these past five years. And, I want to extend my sincere thanks to all persons who made this progress possible."

He pointed out that had it not been for increases from virtually every major source of gifts during the past year, the 75th Anniversary goal would not have been reached.

Contributions from the Mennonite church last year totaled $184,788, up $8,000 from the year before. Alumni gifts were up nearly $17,000, to reach $120,158. Gifts from business and industry were up $14,000 to reach $74,183. The program of Associated Colleges of Indiana yielded $51,844, some $3,000 above the record of the year before.

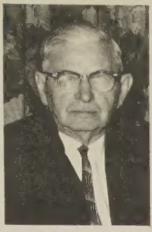
Above: President Mininger spoke on "What the Schrock Plaza Means to Goshen College" during the program of dedication, June 7. The skies cleared shortly before noon after the rainy morning to provide a perfect day for dedication. Also on the program were Gerald Mumaw, president of Goshen College Community Government, Harold Schrock, and a litany led by Dean Kreider. Right: Mrs. Harold Schrock is greeted by Prof. Guy F. Hershberger after the dedication. Guests were received informally by Mr. and Mrs. Schrock, both 1937 graduates of GC, for almost an hour. The plaza includes a lighted pool and fountain, an open area that accommodates up to 900 persons, and a setting that includes locust and linden trees, purple leaf winter creeper, and a number of wood benches.

Powells Give $50,000 To Alma Mater



Mr. Powell

Mrs. Powell

During its 75th anniversary weekend, June 6-7, Goshen College received a gift of real estate located in Knox County, Tenn., valued at $50,000.

Making the gift were two of the school's earliest alumni, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis J. Powell Sr., of Wellman, Iowa. Mr. Powell was a student with the class of '08. Mrs. Powell, the former Ida Hertzler, was in the class of '09.

Mr. and Mrs. Powell Sr., natives of Concord, Tenn., went to Iowa after their college days. Mr. Powell, first a farmhand, entered business as a hardware store partner. He later took over the work of the local funeral director. Still later he added the plumbing and heating business and the furniture business. Now retired, his business interests are being carried on and are growing under the direction of his two sons and three grandsons.

Mrs. Powell went to Iowa and taught school until her marriage, when her role changed to homemaking and assisting her husband.

The gift, undesignated as to use, exemplifies the interests and loyalty of the Powells to the church and its institutions, which they have supported throughout their lives.

Two New Areas for Study-Service Units

President Mininger has announced that Germany and the Far East will be locations of future units for the college's Trimester of Study and Service.

The unit in Germany, to be operated during the 1970 spring trimester, will be led by Dr. and Mrs. Marion R. Wenger. The Wengers recently ended a two-trimester assignment leading similar units in Nicaragua; in the summer of 1967 they also led a unit in Haiti.

The unit in Germany will be operated as an experiment for one trimester only in 1970 and again in 1971 for a trimester. Reasons for the unit are to accommodate students with German language skills and interest in that culture and to examine whether a study-service program in a highly developed Western nation can meet the goals of Goshen's international education program. Up to this time, study-service units have been located in the developing nations of Central America and the Caribbean.

Students in Germany will give unsalaried service in work camps throughout Europe operated by Mennonite Voluntary Service.

Currently receiving consideration for the location of the Far East unit are Taiwan, Hong Kong, Korea, and rural Japan. The leaders will be Mr. and Mrs. John M. Zook, who gave four years of service at the MCC Vocational School in Korea 1959-63. The unit is scheduled to operate only during the 1971 spring trimester.

The Trimester of Study and Service is unique to GC. It is intended virtually for all students. Centered in the young nations of the world, it emphasizes study and unsalaried service, about equally divided. And, it is a vital part of each student's general education.

Christ and Higher Education

By Charles H. Malik

Dr. Charles H. Malik, a former president of the United Nations and a philosophy professor on leave from the University of Beirut, is the first Fellow of the Institute for Advanced Religious Studies at the University of Notre Dame. A native of Lebanon and a devout Christian, Dr. Malik idealizes the great university of the future as that university where Christ and His teachings will be central.

Dr. Mininger, president of Goshen College responded to Dr. Malik's address: "Goshen College has sought and will continue to seek to attain his ideal." The Rev. Richard J. Yordy, chairman of Goshen's Board of Overseers, said, "The merging of academic excellence with a true living faith in Christ must be attained to meet today's world challenge."

Youth and universities are on everybody's mind these days. This is a world and not only an American phenomenon. There is hardly a university campus anywhere in the world — whether in the Eastern or the Western Hemisphere — where youth are not in a state of fundamental ferment. And everybody has been pondering and inquiring into the reason for this unrest. We have all read hundreds of analyses and explanations of this phenomenon, and prescriptions for its cure.

There are scores of causes brought out for the revolt and nihilism of youth, each with a certain degree of cogency. To enumerate only a dozen of the more obvious ones:

1. The war in Viet Nam.
2. The matter of the draft.
3. The general problem of the blacks in America.
4. The special problem of the urban ghetto.
5. The affluent and easy life.
6. The widespread use of drugs — this is both cause and effect.
7. Laxity in morals — this is both cause and effect.
8. The problem of communications between administration, faculty and students.
9. Revolutionary elements and ideas infiltrating American society.
10. The nightmare of the possibility of nuclear war.
11. The burden of enormous world responsibilities which have suddenly devolved upon America.
12. The phenomenal increase of the younger in relation to the older generation.

The Most Ultimate Cause

These and at least a score of other causes can be identified and described, and each one of them doubtless has had a bearing upon the situation. But after due regard is paid each one of these contributing factors I believe we come to the most important, the most fundamental, the most ultimate of all causes: this is the separation in the life of the college and the university between intellect and spirit, between academic excellence and moral excellence, between the integrity of scholarship and the integrity of man, between the idea and the person. The result is a soul, both among the faculty and among the students, that scintillates with brilliance intellectually, to the extent, in the case of the faculty, of producing five wonderful books a year and a score of scholarly articles, but when it comes to spirit, to morals, to man, to responsible living, to the great issues of history, to the ultimate things, it is a child or even less than a child. This radical sundering between a wonderful part of man, his intellect, and the whole of man, his absolute personal responsibility before history and before God, is at the root of all your ills.

The result is an empty soul so far as spiritual and moral content is concerned, so far as the great themes which inspire and induce rigorous personal discipline. And of course the students will rebel, not knowing what they are rebelling against — although they think they do — and of course in searching about for something to fill their souls with they will snatch at a Che Guevara or a Mao Tse-tung or a Ho Chi Minh or a Herbert Marcuse, as the ark of their salvation.

I receive and read many annual reports of presidents and administrators, and — I must be frank with you — I search in vain for any reference in them to the fact that character, morals, spiritual values, personal integrity, have anything to do with the university or with the world of scholarship. So far as the philosophy of the university is concerned, all these reports say the same thing: community of scholars, creative research, an atmosphere of freedom, the unshackled search for truth, and its adequate and free articulation and transmission — all of which indeed are excellent and unexceptionable things, wholly befitting a university, but the absolutizing of what is called truth and scholarship and the relativizing of values and morals and integrity, not just in the community outside as a whole, but on the campus of the university, is, in my opinion, the root of all evil in this realm.

DR. CHARLES H. MALIK (standing) addressed an audience of some 750 on the topic "Christ and Higher Education," at GC's 75th Anniversary Convocation, June 7.

And when it comes to filling this absolutely empty and parched mind with something, consider, I pray you, what it has been filled with during the last two or three generations, not only in departments of philosophy, but in all the departments of the academy, as a most subtle and pervasive philosophy of life. Freud — the development of a total sexual mythology on a radical atheistic basis which has completely overwhelmed the mind. The relativity of morals — that there are no fixed moral standards, but that everything is in a state of flux. Hypocrisy — that you can easily lead two or more lives and get away with it. The cult of success — that you can do anything provided you come out on top. Economism — that it is all a question of security and economics. Materialism — that there is nothing, nothing save matter in motion, from which everything else — mind, spirit, truth, friendship, love — emerges. Linguistic analysis — that all issues vanish if only you define your terms and analyze your propositions. Atheism — that science proves there is no God. Scientism — that science solves all problems. Determinism — that man is not free but is wholly determined by nature and society. This is the fare on

Program Launched to 'Undergird Future'

A two-year program to undergird GC's future was launched in early June, when President Mininger announced the successful completion of the $3.5 million 75th Anniversary Development Program.

The new program spans two years, July 1, 1969, through June 30, 1971, and focuses on funds for current operations and funds for capital purposes.

It calls for maintaining, even exceeding, the level of financial support reached during the last five years for current operations. With capital gifts, endowment will receive priority.

Current Operations

Dr. Mininger outlined 13 areas critical to ongoing operations. The total contributed support required for these operations, 1969-71, is $1,085,000.

Dr. Mininger pointed out that the amount required for each of the needs is not the total required by the College; rather it is that portion which cannot be financed from tuition or other sources.

1. Improvement of Faculty and Staff Salaries, $340,000. The Board of Overseers recently approved an improved scale which aims within five years to bring the salary scale up to the average for the nation's church-related colleges of Goshen's size. Salaries of staff will be improved so they are comparable to those in community business and industry.

2. Faculty and Staff Retirement Program, $85,000. The existing faculty retirement program will be undergirded financially and extended to staff persons.

3. Medical and Survivors' Aid for Faculty and Staff, $20,000. If the College is to be human in its relationships, it will provide adequate aid to faculty and staff families in case of untimely medical costs or death.

4. Student Teaching Assistants, $40,000. Goshen uses qualified students for work and class preparation that professors can delegate. The students receive valuable experience; the teachers are freed to counsel students and for creativity in their specialties.

5. Professional Growth and Improvement, $30,000. Goshen wants to provide each teacher with the necessary books and journals and adequate resources to attend professional meetings so that he may keep up to date in his field.

6. Faculty Research, $20,000. Faculty members propose research at the frontiers of knowledge. Brilliant students want to help them and learn more about research techniques. Such funds help attract and retain good teachers.

7. Supplies for Instruction, Audio-Visual Materials, and Equipment, $90,000. A wide range and variety of teaching materials are required periodically so that the learning process is unhindered.

8. Programmed Self-Instruction and Computer Related Materials, $50,000. Books, materials, and teaching machines that use the programmed self-instruction technique allow students to work at their own pace in learning facts and making judgments about them. Goshen is eager to use its language laboratory experience to expand its programmed learning services.

9. Books and Periodicals, $60,000. The College must have continuing resources for periodicals and books for the library.

10. Student Aid, $200,000. Many students have ability but need extra help and motivation for education at Goshen. As education costs increase, student aid funds will become even more critical to help needy students.

11. Study and Service Program, $50,000. The enthusiasm of returning students makes the College optimistic about the future of its unique Trimester of Study and Service. Funds are required during the first years to "tool up" for the many students in the years ahead.

12. Experimental Programs and New Projects, $40,000. An important thing Goshen can do is to consider optional and better ways of making Christian higher education more relevant and of developing each student as a whole person. Programs which have already been acclaimed are the Trimester of Study and Service and the study and development of projects through which a college can effectively influence students' moral and religious values.

13. Mennonite Board of Education, $60,000. Each school operated by the Board shares in its operating budget. The Board is responsible not only for Goshen College, but also for a junior college, for elementary and secondary education, and for young persons of the church at other colleges and universities.

Capital Expansion in Endowment

President Mininger outlined five endowment projects which will require gifts totaling $4,500,000. The annual income from endowment will provide additional financial undergirding.

Currently, Goshen's endowment is $483,200. The endowment funds required in the 1969-71 program will not only greatly strengthen the College's financial position but also help it consolidate the many gains made in the past five years.

1. Endowed Book Funds, $600,000. These funds will provide annual income for acquiring books and journals for the library.

2. Endowment for Library Operation, $800,000. Annual income from this endowment will assure payment of an adequate staff which includes professional librarians.

3. Endowment for Library Maintenance, $600,000. Endowment income to pay for janitors, heat, lighting, and overall maintenance will provide for perpetual care of an important campus building.

4. Endowed Professorships, $1,500,000. In the years immediately ahead, Goshen College requires at least six endowed professorships. Income from each of the $250,000 endowments is used for a professor's salary and attendant expenses. Endowed professorships encourage excellence in teaching and helps Goshen attract first-rate scholar-teachers.

5. Endowed Scholarships, $1,000,000. Goshen's tradition is that no able student be denied education because of lack of funds. However, as educational costs increase, more and larger scholarships will be necessary.

President Mininger said priority in the two-year program is being given to raising funds for operating needs and for endowment.

However, he also said a number of building projects are in various stages of development, but they will not be carried out unless special, designated gifts become available.

which the mind has been feeding for generations — a fare before which a Plato or an Aristotle or an Augustine or a Kant, or any of the great founders of this country, would blush even to pause, let alone what Paul or Peter or Jesus would do.

The Mind Seeks Fullness

The mind seeks something that fills and satisfies. But it is sent away wanting and empty. For man craves the whole, substantial, life-giving truth. If he is given a caricature of it, he will certainly rebel, even though he might not know why he was rebelling or what he was rebelling against. And man has a most uncanny sense of distinguishing the false from the true.

Christ will not feel at home in any of the major centers of higher learning in the world today. Nor will St. Peter or St. Paul or any of the great saints in Christian history. I can think of every other type of person more or less feeling at home in the principal universities — philosophers, scientists, scholars, poets, industrialists, merchants, farmers, kings, conquerors, tyrants — but not Christ or the saints. Somehow I cannot imagine them visiting or staying long in these intellectual communities. The radical Christians will say, so much the worse for universities; the radical scholars will say, so much the worse for Christ and the saints. This raises the question of whether there is essential enmity between higher learning and Christ, whether human wisdom necessarily excludes and expells Christ. And this question has never been more poignant and more relevant — since people nowadays are clamoring for "relevance" — than today, when universities all over the world have been shaken to their foundations by forces of disruption and revolution, and when the casualties involved, in terms of persons discarded, character softened up, confidence undermined, and spirit terrorized, have been so painful and so costly.

Here at Goshen College Christ is loved and learning is revered. This is therefore a congenial atmosphere in which to treat the question of the separation between Christ and learning — the question of the expulsion of Christ from learning. I deem it therefore an honor indeed to find myself discussing this very question on so fine a campus and on so solemn an occasion.

The Principal Fact

First let us ascertain the principal fact. The finest scholarship and the highest learning appear to flourish in institutions where there is a positive hostility to Christ or where he is either irrelevant or passed by in meaningful silence. Consider the institutions which received Nobel prizes during the last 50 years, or where the most authoritative works on history or philosophy or psychology or literature or any of the sciences have been produced. I doubt that you will find that these institutions produced also saints — people who are very close, in their thought, in their heart, in their life, to Jesus of Nazareth. Is there then anything in learning which makes Christ repugnant to its world and its processes?

Conversely, consider the institutions which cling to Christ come what may. Winners of Nobel prizes have not come out of them, nor authoritative treatises in the various sciences and disciplines. Does Christ, then, somehow incapacitate the mind from seeing and producing what it would have seen and produced better without him?

The two facts I have adduced are undeniable and the two questions they raise are radical questions which must therefore be honestly and radically faced. We should beware of facing them glibly and cavalierly. It is glib to say, of course Christ has nothing to do with science and learning, for look at the enormous scientific progress that has been achieved without him. All that the mind needs to create in the sciences and the arts, after being thoroughly inducted and grounded in the cumulative tradition, is to apply itself to its subject matter sustainedly and concentratedly; and in all this there is no place for Christ. I say it is glib to say this, for we all know that universities first arose and developed in the bosom of the Church, and that without Christ institutions of higher learning would not have been founded in the United States, neither, at least for two centuries, would they have flourished; and those of us who are Christian also know that the wisdom of this world without Christ is foolishness with God, and that when the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of the Cross to save them that believe.

Again, it is too facile to say, Christ is sufficient; let my heart be right with him, let me be close to him, let me repent and make sure of his forgiveness, and I don't care about the deepest truth of matter or life or history or society or art or man or the mind; and I certainly can get along without Nobel prizes. I say it is too facile to say this, because the Lord God commanded us, and Christ concurred, to love Him with all our heart and all our soul and all our strength and all our mind, and because, if the world is the Lord's and the fullness thereof, then it seems to me we ought to be interested both in God and in all that belongs to Him.

No, the problem is not resolved by considering the undoubted fact of the separation between learning and Christ, between reason and faith, between the order of understanding and knowledge and the order of love and suffering, between mind and spirit, between the wisdom of man and the wisdom of God, as a final unchanging law, belonging to the nature of things. I believe higher education in the West, for many reasons which I need not go into here, but for reasons that certainly do not emanate from Christ, has erred in the last few centuries by divorcing itself so radically from Christ, and that, perhaps in the wake of unknown, great sufferings still to try the soul, a great university will arise somewhere to which Christ will return in His full glory and power, a university which will promote scientific, intellectual and artistic excellence to the utmost, so as to produce several Nobel prize winners a year, but which will at the same time leave ample room for Jesus Christ to be and bless and act in it, as in His proper home, and to make it possible for a few young men, while fully mastering the arts and sciences, to develop, in His presence and with His aid, that quality of soul and mind of which the stuff of saints is made.

I am fully and absolutely aware of the difficulties involved in this vision — difficulties stemming from the secular character of present academic existence, from the whole temper of contemporary culture, from the timidity, selfishness, faithlessness and even laziness of those who love and believe in Jesus Christ. But some institution, somewhere, someday, is going to rise to the great challenge posed by this impossible divorce — is going to reject and annul the divorce, taking upon itself the historic responsibility of healing the schism between the order of Christ and the order of learning. This is not going to come about in these easy-going days; I fear much chastening will have to be needed still before the historic moment ripens for this tremendous achievement. For I do not believe the West has suffered enough yet to be worthy of rising to this challenge. For there is absolutely no short cut to being — resurrection comes only after suffering, death and the Cross. Where this institution is going to be, when it is going to assert its existence, under what aegis it will mature and function, which community or society will support it — all these questions I am unable to answer.

The Characteristics of a Great University

But when it arises and however it arises and whoever supports it, such an institution will stress mathematics and the natural and social sciences, and will create in them, at least as much as any institution in the land — at least as much as Harvard or Yale or Princeton — or any institution anywhere else in the world. For no authentic truth in any department of learning is foreign to the Eternal Logos which is Jesus Christ, "in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge" (Col. 2:3).

It will study history on the grand scale, placing the great saga which is American history, with all its novelty and adventure and promise, within its total context — the Graeco-Roman, Hebrew-Christian, Mediterranean-European civilization; and it will draw out the inner melody of this tremendous cumulative unfolding of the spirit over the last 6000 years. In depicting this story it will not fail, from decent respect for the truth, to acknowledge and set forth the proper debt Western civilization owed Muslim-Arab civilization in the Middle Ages.

English and American literature, with Shakespeare at its heart, is the richest in the world. The higher education I am delineating will therefore impart the song and cadence and poetical genius of this wonderful heritage. But it will also draw upon the creations of the great European family of tongues — upon Dante, Racine, Cervantes, Schiller, Goethe, Dostoyevsky, Tolstoy, and Pushkin.

Philosophy will belong to the backbone of the curriculum — the mind wondering, questioning, reflecting, speculating, proposing — from Thales to the present day; the mind also ordering the sciences, and imparting unity and integrity and coherence and hierarchy to all intellectual endeavors.

The Bible, both the Old Testament and the New Testament, being at once the Word of God and by far the greatest book in the world, will be the daily reading and meditation, both in private and in public, for one hour at least, of all students and all teachers.

So will the lives of saints, the great heroes of the spirit, suffering and triumphing, laboring and transforming the world from love and gratitude for Jesus Christ, throughout this tremendous heritage, from Abraham the father of the faithful to the present day.

Theology — the responsible thinking through, in total piety and obedience, of the deliveries of the Christian faith — will enjoy a central role.

There will be circles of friends, sometimes extending to cover the whole assembly of the school, meeting with the deepest joy and peace, meeting to discuss and debate and argue every theme of common interest — all in the presence and under the forgiveness of Jesus Christ.

Rigorous personal discipline will be stressed — the discipline of prayer and meditation and moral wrestling, as well as of physical fitness — on a daily and perpetual basis.

The Church, with its liturgy and sacraments and music and song and diverse ministries and rootedness in the great tradition, will be at the heart of the life of the community, preferably within the school itself, but at least side by side with it.

Now our world is increasingly becoming one, in half a dozen senses of the term. Therefore the higher education we are projecting will work out the unity of man all over the world, in the threefold sense of a being endowed with reason and conscience, a being subject to the assaults and deceptions of the devil, and a being therefore who is everywhere a candidate for salvation through Jesus Christ. This essential human unity should not compromise or blur the absolute uniqueness of Jesus Christ with respect to every man, every people, every nation, every faith, every culture, and every civilization.

The students, before they complete their course of studies, will be sent out to the world for direct responsibility and experience, certainly in summers and perhaps also for one or two years of service. This responsible exposure to and testing in real life is most important.

Higher education under Christ — to complete absolutely with, and even to surpass, the finest secular education in the world, and at the same time to impart the deepest dedication and love for Jesus Christ — will take more than four years; it may require five or even six or seven years. In view of the growth of automation in industry and of the increasing abundance of wealth and leisure, young men are not pressed to work and produce early; they need not be geared into productive economic life before the age of 25 or even 30. How wonderful to keep on learning and perfecting your mind and soul, without a worry in the world, in complete joy and freedom under Christ, until the age of 30, in a community of the purest love and fun and friendship!

Abolish the Awful Divorce

Surely I have idealized. But I take equally seriously both the passion for truth and the love for Jesus Christ, both the demands of man and the demands of God. For Jesus Christ to me is at once "the Son of Man" and "the way, the truth, and the life." Consequently, I beg you to forgive my idealizing and to forget everything I said. Only produce a higher education, in a decade, in a generation, in a century, which, while competing in the free open market of the world with the finest secular higher education anywhere in the world, will at the same time abolish the awful divorce between Christ and learning, between spiritual depth and intellectual excellence, that has characterized and cursed Western education for generations — an education, I mean, which genuinely combines reason and faith, Jesus Christ and the finest intellectual sophistication, God and man, the highest perfection of the mind with the deepest love for the Lord Jesus Christ. Nothing short of this ideal, however you actualize it, is adequate to meet the terrible crisis weighing upon the heart of the world today.

For you can win the whole world, and therewith the moon and the stars, through your science and scholarship, through your inventiveness and productivity, through your industry and technique, and still lose your soul. The problem is to remain spiritually on top of things, on top of wealth and comfort, on top of every material pressure, on top of every seductiveness, on top of the world.

The Greatest Question Today

Will the spirit survive and control modern technological civilization? This is the greatest question that can be asked today.

The spirit can and the spirit should and the spirit will survive technological urban existence. It can also control and direct it to the glory of God. But surely I am not thinking of any spirit — I am not thinking of a spirit ueberhaupt. What then is the spirit which can and which should and which will survive and control technological civilization, and without which this civilization, even if it survived this spirit, would be worth nothing?

This is the spirit of trust, forbearance, love, understanding, forgiveness, community; the spirit of joy, openness, confidence, self-giving, meekness, humility; the spirit of sorrow and repentance; the spirit of recognizing and loving truth, vision, being when you see them; the spirit of patience, longsuffering, gentleness; the spirit of wonder, reverence, godliness, personal standards of honor and purity; the spirit of concord, unity, peace, soberness, the deepest freedom; the spirit that is not jealous, that does not envy, that does not puff itself up, that does not rebel in the face of inevitable tragedy; the spirit of strength, moral power, moral certainty.

There is no man where this spirit does not exist. Man then is only a fraud and a deception. And this spirit is independent from the most beautiful city, the cleanest city, the city with the most wonderful libraries, parks and museums — and, I might add, zoos — it is independent from the most refined culture, the culture with the highest education; it is independent from the most affluent society, the most just society where all are equally respected, where everybody is secure, where nobody is discriminated against, the society where science and technology have attained their highest perfection.

For such a society without this spirit independently and originally infusing and permeating it from the beginning and all along could easily nurture the exact opposite of this spirit; it could nurture the spirit of hatred, envy, jealousy, hardness of heart, callousness, mechanicalness; the spirit of variance, strife, contention, controversy, conflict, war; the spirit of uncleanness, impiety, sensuality, total and unbridled rebellion; the spirit of superstition and magic; the spirit which at its heart worships gadgets and means — instruments made by its own hands; the demonic spirit whose heart is set on that absolute blur of being which is nothingness.

The spirit which we cannot afford — which we are not permitted — to let go in this wayward and deeply troubled world — even if otherwise we knew all secrets and controlled every force of nature — is the holy spirit of Jesus Christ. "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God. . . . Hereby know ye the spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God; and every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God" (I Jn. 4:1-3).

The Need Before Educators

I therefore beg educators to give some thought to the independence of this spirit, to its original character. I beg them to remember that it does not automatically emerge once the natural conditions are set right, once the finest education is ensured. It must please Jesus Christ to impart it himself. For this holy spirit has a different law, a different energy, a different logic, a different source and origin from anything appertaining to the natural strivings of men. It demands genuine personal confession. Christ himself must be there to give and sustain and guarantee His holy spirit.

For I believe it was Jesus Christ Himself, God Himself, the Holy Ghost Himself, who is one with God and Christ, who was speaking through Jeremiah when the prophet shouted:

"Thus saith the Lord, Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might, let not the rich man glory in his riches: but let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the Lord which exercise loving-kindness, judgment, and righteousness, in the earth: for in these things I delight, saith the Lord" (Jer. 9:23-24).

a new dimension to annuities

Life income for you. Timely support for Christian higher education.

When you pay income tax on bank interest, you are actually receiving a lower return on your principle than the published rate. An annuity for the benefit of Goshen College gives you more usable income each year. Why? Because there's more of it left after taxes.

As long as you live, only a small portion of the annual guaranteed payment is taxable. Isn't that just like getting a higher rate of return on your investment?

Such an annuity also gives you generous tax deductions the first year. And that means more real income for you.

Alumni May Help Choose Next Prexy

You have a chance to help in the selection of the next president of Goshen College.

All alumni of Goshen College are invited to submit not only names of possible candidates but also what qualifications the next president should have.

At its regular meeting in mid-September, the executive board of the Alumni Association acted to send a special announcement to all alumni to inform them that each one is eligible to give counsel on qualifications and to submit names.

The Presidential Selection Committee met for the first time on Saturday, September 20. A second meeting is set for Saturday, October 11. Other meetings are also planned.

At the first meeting Dr. Paul M. Lederach, of Scottdale, Pa., president of the Mennonite Board of Education, and Daniel E. Kauffman, also of Scottdale, chairman of the Board of Overseers, outlined to the seven-member selection committee the nature of the task before them. In an evening session, the committee planned its method of procedure. Before beginning to consider names, the committee plans to outline carefully the qualifications deemed desirable in the person to be selected.

On the Presidential Selection Committee are:

Chairman: Dr. Carl Kreider '36, dean, Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana 46526

Secretary: Mrs. Edwin (Helen Wade) Alderfer '43, writer-editor and schoolteacher, Department of Pastoral Care, North Carolina Baptist Hospital, Winston-Salem, North Carolina 27103. Mrs. Alderfer is the elected representative of the Alumni Association.

Other Members: Charles W. Ainlay '41, attorney at law, Yoder, Ainlay, Ulmer & Buckingham, 130 North Main Street, Goshen, Indiana 46526. Mr. Ainlay is the community representative on the committee.

Dr. John S. Oyer '51, professor of history, Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana 46526. Prof. Oyer is the elected representative of the faculty.

Wilbert R. Shenk '55, Secretary for overseas missions, Mennonite Board of Missions, 1711 Prairie Street, Elkhart, Indiana 46514. Mr. Shenk is the elected representative of the Board of Overseers.

Don Troyer '71, a junior at Goshen College. Mr. Troyer is the elected representative of the GC student body.

The Rev. Peter B. Wiebe '49, Hesston College church pastor and counselor, Hesston College, Hesston, Kansas 67062. Mr. Wiebe is the elected representative of the Mennonite Board of Education.

A number of persons have already begun to think about the qualifications of the next chief executive of Goshen College. Below is one list of a variety of possible qualifications. You are invited to think seriously about what the qualifications of the next president should be and draw up your own list.

- Christian experience and church commitment
- Is acquainted with the Mennonite Church and acceptable to a large segment of the brotherhood
- Is an educator
- Understands learning and the conditions under which it takes place
- Is committed to Christian education
- Is experienced in higher education and in administration of higher education
- An earned doctor's degree is preferred but not an essential
- Is an educational innovator
- Can maintain a flexible style of administration
- Can delegate responsibility
- Can communicate with the college constituencies
- Can involve faculty and students in decision making
- Has vision and sense of direction as well as the ability to think realistically
- Understands finance and fund raising and is able to attract financial support

You are welcome to write to the alumni representative, Mrs. Alderfer, or to any member of the committee, and to offer your counsel on the importance of any of the above qualifications or on other qualifications. It is in order for you to do this at your earliest convenience. Dr. Mininger, GC's ninth president, stated last July that his resignation is to be effective January 1, 1970, if possible, but no later than July 1, 1970.

Mrs. Alderfer to Represent Alumni On Selection Committee

Mrs. Edwin Alderfer (Helen Wade '43), the alumni representative on the Presidential Selection committee, lives with her husband and two of their children in Winston-Salem, N. C.

She has served as home life editor for Christian Living magazine for 10 years, and is continuing that assignment as well as teaching English, social studies, and reading improvement at Carver Junior High School in Winston-Salem this year.

An editor-writer, Helen has served as editor of Voice for several years and edited A Farthing in Her Hand, a book on stewardship for women.

The Alderfers have served at the Mennonite mission in Canton, Ohio, in the Civilian Public Service Camp at Bartio, Florida, with the Mennonite Central Committee unit in the Philippine Islands, and in schools at Culp, Arkansas, and at Christopher Dock High, near Lansdale, Pa. For the past eleven years Edwin has served as pastor at the Kingview and North Scottdale churches at Scottdale, Pa. This year he is an intern in the School of Pastoral Care at the North Carolina Baptist Hospital.

Two children, Ann, a senior, and Faith, a freshman, are students at Goshen College. Eric '68 is in CPS at the Church Center at the United Nations in New York.

Before the Executive Board of the Alumni Association considered names for its representative to the Presidential Selection Committee, it listed a number of criteria.

Among them were:

- Parent of a current student or recent student
- Person who is widely known and has many acquaintances with alumni
- Person with a warm feeling toward the College

The Executive Board feels Mrs. Alderfer meets these criteria. She, along with the other members of the committee, is ready to receive your counsel on the task that lies before the committee.

Your prayers as well as letters are earnestly solicited.

National Chairman Named For 1970 Alumni Fund

Named to lead the 1970 Alumni Annual Fund is Don Kreider '38, president and chief executive officer of Pioneer Trust & Savings Bank, of Chicago, Ill.

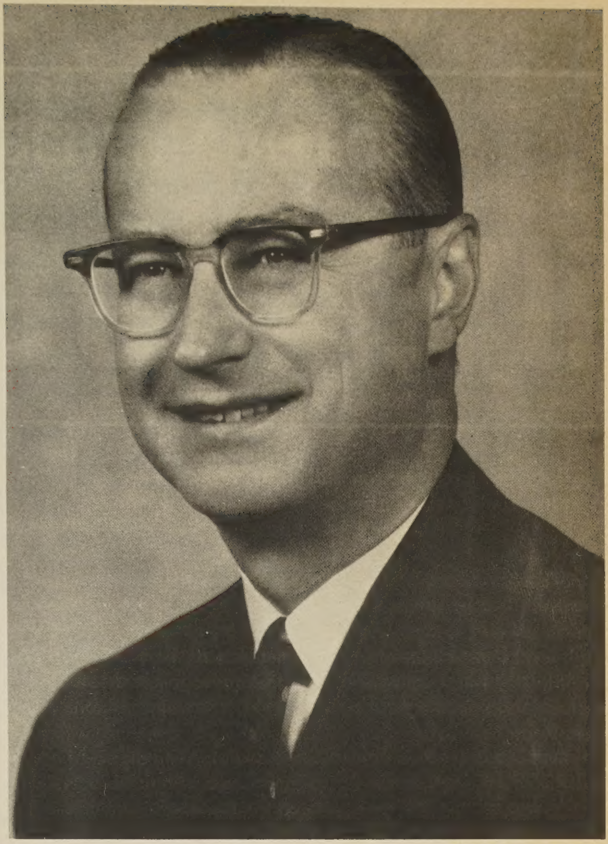
Mr. Kreider will be national chairman and will be assisted by a corps of class agents who will write to their fellow class members about the requirements of their alma mater.

Last year's fund netted Goshen College $120,158.30. The gifts were used for a variety of purposes, with the larger part going toward the operations of the college, such as faculty and staff salaries and benefits, instructional supplies, books and periodicals, routine building maintenance and groundskeeping, and utilities. (A complete report and honor roll of donors will be released later this month.--Ed.)

The Alumni Association Annual Fund Committee--composed of Harold E. Hartzler '56, Lloyd E. Hartzler '38, Clifford P. Martin '27, Mrs. Roger (Earlene) Nofziger '60, and Gordon Yoder '51 --stresses again this year Goshen College's requirement for "unrestricted gifts." Such gifts make it possible for the College to allocate them wherever they are needed most in the operations. And, the "unrestricted gifts" tradition in the Goshen College Alumni Fund is in the pattern of the majority of liberal arts colleges Goshen's size across the country which ask for alumni support.

"Living Endowment" is another name for annual gifts undesignated as to use. Institutions blessed richly with wealth enjoy large annual incomes from their endowment funds. Other schools, like Goshen, are proud that their alumni and other constituencies give year after year to help provide income which just isn't there so far as endowment is concerned. "Living Endowment" income, contributed annually by alumni, is just as welcome as that from regular endowment.

Class agents under the direction of Mr. Kreider will begin their duties late in October. The 1970 Annual Fund was launched July 1, 1969, and will close June 30, 1970. Your gifts are deductible for income tax purposes.



Don Kreider joined the Pioneer Trust & Savings Bank on May 1, 1966, as an Executive Vice President after 25 years of banking and financial experience. One year later he was elected President and Chief Executive Officer of this $200 million bank. His career includes senior management positions in Chicago banks as well as bank examination work with the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Industrial experience was also a part of Mr. Kreider's background when he served seven years as Assistant Treasurer of a manufacturing company in Ohio doing a nationwide business.

Mr. Kreider is a member of Robert Morris Associates (an organization of bank credit men), and previously served as a Governor of the Chicago Chapter of the Associates. He is also a member of the Executive Club of Chicago and the American Institute of Banking. For many years he has been active in Chicago charitable and community work, having been a Director of Sears-YMCA, the Greater Lawndale Conservation Commission, and Chairman of Area B Finance Campaign for the Chicago Area Council of Boy Scouts.

The Kreiders live in Lombard, Ill., where they are active in both civic and church work. Three children are at home; three others live in other states.

John J. Hostetler '51

John J. Hostetler '51 Voted President-Elect

John J. Hostetler '51, of Topeka, Ind., has been elected president-elect of the Alumni Association.

Elected to the executive board have been Harold E. Hartzler '56, of Elkhart, Ind., John D. King '57, of Western Springs, Ill., Verna Burkholder (Mrs. Dana O.) Troyer '43, of Goshen, Ind., and Dr. Donald G. Wyse '57, of West Liberty, Ohio.

The election results were tallied from 1,002 ballots, received last May, which represented the votes of 1,292 alumni.

The president-elect is elected in odd-numbered years for a two-year term. This term is followed by a two-year term as president and then a two-year term as past president. Mr. Hostetler took office on July 1, 1969, when Dr. Larry L. Beachy '57, of Goshen, Ind., became president, and Frank Ulrich '55, of Archbold, Ohio, became past president.

Board members serve two years. In even-numbered years like 1970 five persons will be elected. Including the president, president-elect, past president, and executive secretary, the executive board numbers 13.

The Executive Board and nominating committee were pleased with the participation in the 1969 election and encourage more to take part in the 1970 balloting, which will be conducted next spring along similar patterns. Comments or suggestions may be sent to the executive secretary.

An Open Letter from the Alumni Association's New President

What are the plans for the future? What lies ahead for the Alumni Association of Goshen College?

First, I hope all of us can work together to carry out the plans and perform the duties of the committees already formed. Second, I hope I can become better acquainted with each of you through the Alumni Newsletter and various alumni meetings. Third, I hope each alumnus will try very diligently to visit Goshen College sometime in the next two years. I know you have questions about the old "alma mater." What better way to answer them than to pay a visit to the campus.

Goshen College has played a very important role in each of our lives. Let us join together and become a guiding influence in the life of the college. Let's continue to put the GO in our Alumni Association.

May I take this time to thank President Mininger for his fine leadership during his years of service as president. Not only has our college made important new advances but also relations with the community here in Goshen have reached a new plateau.

I would also like to express the sincere thanks from all the alumni to Frank Ulrich, our past Alumni Association president. Under his efficient leadership, we have updated our constitution and given our association not only a new look but new goals.

Sincerely,

L L Beachy DDS

Annual Fund for 1970 for 'Living Endowment'

The 1970 Alumni Fund for "Living Endowment" for Goshen College will be launched with intensive effort in mail appeals in early November.

"Living Endowment" means annual gifts from persons and firms to help pay for the operations of the school. Such gifts are allocated wherever they are needed most and can be used with great flexibility. They provide the margin that helps GC offer the quality Christian education it has been noted for.

Alumni support of Goshen College is vital in a number of areas. First, if alumni — the product of the school — think highly of it, business, industry, the church, and foundations are prone to take notice.

Second, GC alumni last year gave a record-breaking $120,158 to their alma mater. This year the opportunities before the school are even greater. Required are funds for building the strength of the faculty and staff, student aid, teaching materials, periodicals and books, experimental programs and new projects, for "tooling up" the Trimester of Study and Service, and for a variety of other purposes. Also high priority are fund requirements for campus improvement, heating and air conditioning units, and renovation of classrooms.

Securing endowment funds is also a major objective this year and next.

The 1970 Annual Fund closes June 30, 1970. Gifts are deductible for income tax purposes.

Bauman Tries Penalty Kick

John Bauman, sophomore, of Goshen, Ind., aims a penalty kick during the GC-Grace College game on October 7. No score was made, but the Maple Leafs captured the game anyway, 3-0. After the Maple Leafs tangled with the U. of Notre Dame on October 15 (tie score, 1-1), the ND coach said, "Goshen has been the best opponent we've played to date."

Featured in 'SR'

The October 18, 1969, issue of Saturday Review described GC's new Trimester of Study and Service abroad in a short article on Page 84.

SR called it, "A unique program combining traditional study abroad with a period of Peace Corps-type service in a developing country."

It continued, "Inspiration for the program grew out of the traditional Mennonite concept of service as well as a conviction that 'traditional education was becoming obsolete as a means of preparing students for a meaningful life.'"

Receives $159,431 to Set Up Research Lab

Goshen College has received two foundation gifts totaling $159,431 to set up a physics research lab to continue research studies in the physical sciences by faculty and students.

A gift of $125,000 from the Basil S. Turner Foundation, of Elkhart, Ind., will provide equipment and basic salary support for the staff time in the new lab in the first five years. A grant of $34,431 from Research Corporation, of New York, is being used for equipment to set up a new type of X-ray spectrometer required to measure highly perfect crystals of the kind used in modern electronics.

To be named the Turner Precision X-ray Measurements Laboratory in honor of Mr. Turner, chairman of the executive committee of the CTS Corporation, and Mrs. Turner, the lab will be located on the ground floor of Science Hall.

The new computer-controlled spectrometer, designed by Dr. Robert C. Buschert '48, director of the Turner lab, is scheduled for delivery during October. Other lab equipment such as X-ray generators and power supplies are being set up.

Pres. Mininger said that the vision Mr. Turner has expressed in the past months and the support of the Turner Foundation will make possible a physics research and education program much wider in scope than had been earlier thought possible. Instead of being a traditional research project, with outside support, of the kind that is carried on at many universities, the new program will provide research experiences for a significant number of liberal arts undergraduates at Goshen College.

Lab Meets Several Objectives

Dr. Mininger explained that college students ordinarily do not have the chance to become personally familiar with research scientists at work until much too late in their school careers.

The facilities and program of the Turner Laboratory, however, will fulfill the Goshen College vision of an undergraduate program in which students can work closely with researchers. Not only will students pursuing careers in physics work in the laboratory, but so also will many others.

Dr. Buschert Recognized

Dr. Robert C. Buschert has been internationally recognized for making X-ray measurements of silicon crystals. Earlier a faculty member at Purdue University, Dr. Buschert first projected the idea of making the new X-ray measurements last year in the course of his continuing research at Goshen and Purdue. The past two summers Dr. Buschert was on the staff of Bell Telephone Laboratories, where interest in his proposals led to time and facilities for further development.

Associated with Dr. Buschert in the project from its beginning has been Dr. Albert J. Meyer '50, research professor of physics at the college. Mr. Dennis Kauffman '68, administrative and instructional assistant in the physics department, is the third investigator. Mr. John Gotwals '62, currently completing his doctoral work at Purdue University, will join the staff in January, 1970.

Two undergraduate fellows, Dale Richard Yoder, a senior from Kalona, Iowa, and James Herschberger, a senior from Hatfield, Pa., have been appointed for 1969-70. In addition, undergraduate students will assist in measurements, computer programming, and other ways.

Very Sensitive

The new double-source spectrometer, which Dr. Buschert designed and which will be the heart of the new laboratory, will be ten times more sensitive than the "three-crystal spectrometer" which he designed in 1965 and which was then 100 times more sensitive than any instrument of its kind in existence.

The new apparatus, according to Dr. Buschert, gives promise of being more sensitive, more stable, and simpler than methods used to this time.

Simply put, the new apparatus will measure in parts per billion the average spacing between layers of atoms in highly perfect crystals. For example, suppose every ten millionth atom in a silicon crystal were a foreign atom, say, carbon. The change in spacing between the layers of atoms due to the presence of foreign atoms, even in such extremely small amounts, will be measurable with the new spectrometer.

Gordon Yoder '51, (left) Elkhart, Ind., receives a special thank-you plaque from Frank Ulrich '55, president of the Alumni Association, at the annual meeting of the association on June 7. Mr. Yoder was national chairman of the 1969 Alumni Fund which raised slightly more than $120,000 for Goshen College.

Thank You, Fellow Alumni

The Alumni Annual Fund provides a special structure for annual giving. Simply stated, it brings together every year the gifts of alumni to the operating budget of our alma mater.

I am glad to report that the 1969 Fund has been a success. The amount raised beat totals from recent years. My personal appreciation goes to each of you who made last year's fund a landmark success.

Now we look ahead. Currently we are in a Presidential Seeking year. Further, Goshen's growth in academic excellence and quality Christian education depends upon continuing and steadily increasing annual operating support.

I hope you agree with me that Goshen is the kind of college which deserves your support and your enthusiasm. I have confidence that you will respond willingly and unselfishly when asked to make your gift to the 1970 Fund.

Sincerely yours,

Frank Ulrich

THE 1969 ALUMNI HONOR ROLL

If some names are incorrectly spelled or recorded or are omitted (and some things do occur in these listings regardless of all the care that is taken to prevent them), we hope you will overlook the errors. Goshen tries to keep a careful record because it so deeply appreciates the support of its many alumni and friends. If your name does not appear or is incorrectly recorded, we ask your forgiveness and request that you provide us with the correct information so that our records may be promptly corrected.

How to Join This Honor Roll

All you need to do is make a gift of any sort for the benefit of Goshen College. It may be in cash, by check, or in the form of securities, property, books, or objects of art. When the annual report for the 1969-70 academic year is published, your name will be listed (but not the amount of the gift) on the next Honor Roll.

Substantial gifts are essential to fulfill the many requirements of Goshen College, but also of great importance to GC is the increasing number of individual givers. Thus, every gift of any sort is deeply appreciated.

Goshen College

BULLETIN

October, 1969 Vol. LXIII. No. 7.

The "Alumni Newsletter" edition of the Goshen College Bulletin is intended for alumni, friends of the College, and parents of students.

You can have your cake . . . and eat it too.

By giving, you can continue to receive.

Let's say you enter into a Charitable Gift Annuity agreement with Goshen College. Most important, your gift will help Goshen College continue to prepare young men and women for lives of usefulness.

But you learn that by giving you receive. First, you are guaranteed an income for the rest of your life. Second, you pay income taxes on only part of that income.

You even receive more than that. If the gift money were in your savings account instead of a Charitable Gift Annuity, you would receive less than the published rate of return on your principle. Why? Because you must pay income tax on bank interest. That's another way your spendable income can increase by entering into a Charitable Gift Annuity Agreement. Your annuity also gives you generous tax deductions the first year. And that means more real income for you that year.

Two seminary students (left) learn to know an assembly-line workman at an Elkhart factory in the course, supervised experience in ministry (industrial). Reflecting on it, a minister says, "It helps me understand the problems and frustrations of the industrial workers in my congregation. I had the benefit of a 'shock effect' when I began to understand the workday world in which these persons live. Before, I was wasting their time because I was talking past them."

Goshen Biblical Seminary: Its New Program

For centuries theologians in European universities educated other theologians and ministers for congregational leadership. America's first theological seminaries such as those at Harvard, Yale, and Princeton were patterned after the university tradition. Other American seminaries followed the same pattern. Little critical thought was given whether this was the best way to set up a program to educate ministers in the New World.

In the past few decades theologians and educators have begun to search for new ways to prepare ministers. They raised theological questions about the nature of the church and the ministry, for example. They also observed a number of things from a practical standpoint. For example, when young seminary graduates preached sermons during their first years in a pastorate, they sounded more like university lecturers than pastors who knew the daily problems before their members.

It is not surprising, then, that Mennonite theologians and educators also began to look for new ways of training ministers. They were eager to see how their believers' church theology and interpretation of the Bible would shape the course of studies.

Beginning in late 1966 a group of seminary faculty known as the Dean's Seminar set to work. Equipped with a grant from Lilly Endowment, Inc., an Indianapolis-based foundation, the seven men — Ross T. Bender, C. J. Dyck, Leland Harder, William Klassen, Millard C. Lind, John C. Wenger, and John H. Yoder — began in earnest to examine, first, what underlying assumptions there should be for preparing ministers in the Anabaptist-Mennonite heritage, and second, what program of studies would be true to these assumptions.

Their work was known as a study project to develop a model for theological education in the Free Church tradition. What they were searching for was the most effective way to educate "ministers" for the kind of church in which everyone is a minister. That is, every baptized Christian has a spiritual gift to exercise in the whole body of believers. This idea of church and ministry is found in Ephesians 4.

After 78 seminar meetings and numerous faculty discussions, a new program was announced. The implications of it reached far and wide. Already some of the new features have been introduced into the program and plans are moving ahead to launch even more. These developments, which emphasize Christian community as the context for learning, called for a single campus and were one factor in the move of the Goshen College Biblical Seminary to the campus of the Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries at Elkhart. There the Goshen seminary, still a separate institution, joins Mennonite Biblical Seminary, an institution of the General Conference Mennonite Church, in carrying out the program for students from both groups, as well as for students from other traditions who enroll.

A Distinctive Perspective

The program launched this fall introduces a distinctive perspective to the preparation of Mennonite ministers. This dimension is added to the traditional seminary idea of the education of ministers. It includes new content for the courses of studies as well as a new context in which they are taught.

That is to say, many of the values of traditional seminary education have been kept and strengthened. At the same time, they are recognized as being only part of the answer for the effective minister of tomorrow. Specifically, those values include diligent study, intellectual discipline, inquiry, critical reflection.

The new dimension centers in understanding that God is creating a people for His name. What God is doing in history revealed throughout the Old and New Testaments as well as since the Bible was written is bringing into being a people of faith. The frontier now before prospective ministers is to attempt to discover and realize what it is to be that faithful people of God.

The unique combination of "intellectual inquiry" plus "faithful people of God" means (1) courses as well as Christian commitment, (2) study of biblical and church history and theology as well as the personal response of faith, (3) skills of the scholar as well as skills of ministering, (4) observing the acts of God on the current scene as well as getting into those acts, (5) understanding the elements of preaching, forgiveness, reconciliation, healing, worship, mutual aid, decision-making, pastoral care, witness and service as well as taking part personally and intimately in each of them.

The Dean's Seminar proposed six new aspects for the program to supplement what was already being done to prepare ministers. The six aspects are explained below; some parts of them are not yet in complete operation, but will be developed at the appropriate times.

1. Experience in Christian Community

The underlying concept of Christian community is the awareness that I can be related to God only as I am related to my brother. As I meet with my brother believer and understand his needs and he mine, God meets with us (see I John 4:19-21). God calls us into fellowship with Him and with each other through His Son in the body of Christ (see Ephesians 4). Every baptized believer agrees (or "covenants," according to the language of the Dean's Seminar) with his brother to follow Christ and learn His will — for himself as well as for all the people of God.

The idea of "covenant community" is distinctive to the Anabaptist understanding of the nature of the church and stands in direct contrast to other classical views of the church, both Protestant and Catholic. For example, much of modern Protestantism has been influenced by Western philosophy and life on the frontier in which rugged individualism has been glorified. It's every man for himself — you go your way and I'll go mine — I'll interpret the Bible the way I want and you can interpret it your way. That's pretty far removed from the idea of a covenant community where believers come to consensus and brotherly understanding on important issues. Furthermore, in covenant community the distinction between clergy and laity is not important as it is in some churches.

The question then arises: If every believer is a minister, why do we prepare other ministers in seminaries? It is simply answered. The occasion for a congregation to call a minister with professional skills is not to displace the individual spiritual gifts of the believers but rather to mobilize them, supplement the gifts already there, and help develop the gifts potentially there, so that the congregation can work effectively. The additional resources required by each congregation as it calls a minister with professional skills will depend primarily on (1) the spiritual gifts the congregation already has, and (2) the task before the congregation in its community.

In describing such a minister's role, some have compared it to a playing coach of a football team. The coach is, to be sure, a player like the others. Hence, he will preach, teach, counsel, and pray along with the other ministers (baptized believers) in the church. But he is called, not primarily because of his playing ability, but because he knows the game and is able to equip others to play their positions well. The seminary is both a school for training playing coaches, and a training camp where other team members may come to enhance their skills for the game.

The new seminary program provides five types of experience to help prospective ministers understand the meaning and relevance of the covenant community called church.

A. Koinonia Groups. Small cell groups which include students and faculty members meet regularly to talk and make decisions that could range from stewardship to housing, change of studies and jobs to family living. Each one is encouraged to "level" with the group, to disclose himself as best he can. What comes out of these sessions? A new level of trust in each other, a new awareness of one's brother in Christ, usually a new commitment to Christ.

B. Forum. All students and faculty members meet twice weekly in a congregational-type meeting to (1) fellowship, (2) exchange ideas, (3) explore a special topic, or (4) listen to a special lecturer or a panel. Topics might include: How can I be a responsible member of our covenant community? Are we Mennonites the quiet people with the hidden churches, or do we get involved in society? Should our political activities include voting or more than voting?

The nature of the issues determines the kind of consensus that is required. If the community is of common mind, it is ready to move ahead. Or, if there is not complete agreement, a member might say, "I trust you to move ahead. I don't see the way, but I'll move along with you until I do." Or, another might say, "I don't agree with this stand, but I trust the way we worked at it, and I'll go along." Or, he might say, "We should spend more time to study this issue." So much depends on the quality of life together within the community.

Why are forums important? Suppose Bro. A accepts a pastorate. After two years the matter of divorce and remarriage comes up in his congregation. The thorny problem splits the congregation in half. Will Bro. A get caught in the middle, develop a bleeding ulcer, and eventually leave the ministry? Or will he be able to offer personal resources and strengths as well as theological insights to his congregation? It is hoped that his theological preparation as well as his Koinonia group and forum experiences from his years at seminary will help him in such a situation.

C. Chapel Services. Students and faculty meet regularly for worship, singing, prayer, preaching, one or a combination of them. This is a time for the celebration and renewal of the covenant which binds them together in the body of Christ.

D. Field Work. Students accept specific assignments in congregations or in other service-training areas to develop skills such as preaching, teaching, evangelizing, administration, counseling, or leading in music and worship. Each student sees his own gifts in relation to the spiritual gifts of others in the total work of the faithful people of God.

E. Commissioning. At a special service at the close of the year students and teachers gather to (1) certify that they believe the graduates and any other persons terminating their studies are following the call of God as they have discerned it together, and (2) assure those who are called of their prayers in their new assignments. A moving occasion, it also includes sending fraternal greetings to the congregation or agency calling each person.

2. Supervised Pastoral Education

Supervised experiences in two distinct types of situations — a pastorate and a hospital or similar clinical setting — provide students with opportunities to get next to persons and understand their motivations and difficulties. The program, often arranged so students can take part in the pastoral and clinical settings in the same nine-month period, involves the student-pastor, congregational pastor, accredited supervisor, congregation, and patients or clients in the clinical setting. Currently in its first year, the program is in operation at Akron, Pa., Newton, Kan., Hesston, Kan., and London, Ont. In each locality a congregation has been willing to take at least one student-pastor; there is also a psychiatric center nearby to provide clinical experiences.

For the congregation, it requires time, patience, talent, and money to make the supervised pastoral experience work. For example, suppose Student A will preach on the second Sunday of next month. The committee of overseers appointed by the congregation to help in his year of internship and Student A's supervisor will meet and talk with the student about his projected sermon. They are likely to ask him a number of questions. What text do you plan to use? Why? What is the practical application of your sermon to us? Why do we need this sermon?

After the meeting the student develops his outline, then preaches his sermon. Afterward the committee will meet again, this time to criticize the content of the sermon as well as its delivery. One person might remark, "You didn't convince me because you didn't seem to believe in what you were preaching."

While serving the internship in the congregation, the student is also gaining experiences in a clinical setting. The two types of experiences reinforce and supplement each other, and provide numerous opportunities to translate principles of ministering to persons into actual life situations.

One person in clinical education in a hospital recalls, I visited a 56-year-old man whose left leg was amputated because of a blood clot. He had been a faithful church member and even now had reason to be grateful to God for preserving his life. His heart stopped beating on the operation table; and by emergency procedures in cases like this, he was resuscitated and the operation was successful.

His problem now was to understand why God was permitting him to get well and live when other patients in the ward were suffering and dying. In the next bed was an 18-year-old boy in constant pain with an inoperable tumor on his spine. In another part of the ward was an 11-year-old boy curled up with crippling arthritis, who made his way around in a wheelchair.

"Chaplain," said the patient, "something has happened to me in here. I've been a religious man all my life, but right now I don't know what I believe or if I believe anything. It's not myself I'm concerned about. I've had a good life — never been sick much until now. What I can't understand is the young people in here who are suffering. If God is all powerful and loves them, why doesn't He do something for them? Why should I live on, when children have to die? There must be some purpose for going on living, but this is exactly what bothers me. Why should my pain be taken away and these kids be made to suffer? Chaplain, can you answer my question?"

The intern described the problem as the age-old one of evil and from his storehouse of intellectually learned theological concepts, he did have some answers.

But in an interview with his supervisor later, he was scored severely. He had failed to recognize that the patient was not so much ignorant of the problem of evil in a theoretical way as he was disillusioned about it in his immediate experience. The supervisor pointed out, "One learns that he doesn't have to have the answers to all the questions persons ask, but he has to be the answer."

No matter where students choose to be interns, they are always confronted by the evaluations of their supervisor and fellow students. In these sessions, the question "Why?" is asked most often. Why does Student A have difficulty recording his interviews? Why does he relate so aggressively to this patient? Why does he so readily run errands at patients' requests? Why does he want to reassure everyone who is disturbed? Why is he so eager to use easy religious panaceas? The result is that the student begins to see his own weaknesses, defenses, and hostilities. At first painful, the method when employed with Christian love helps bring about redemptive results.

Beside giving students experiences in pastoral counseling, clinical pastoral education helps students answer the question which often gnaws at them, "Should I be a pastor or not?" A period of internship in a congregational setting helps them answer their question before they are graduated and thrust into their first assignment.

3. Theological Center

Relief workers, missionaries, Christian educators, church administrators, rural pastors, urban pastors, inner city pastors, and others who reflect the frontiers of the church's ministry in the world are invited to bring their experiences and insights into the midst of the seminary community.

The Theological Center is the label applied to the program of visitors-in-residence at the seminary. This fall Dr. Marthe Ropp, French Mennonite medical missionary to Indonesia, and Pastor Takashi Yamada, of Japan, have been visitors. Next spring the Rev. Hubert Schwartzentruber, of St. Louis, Mo., and the Rev. E. J. Swalm, of the Brethren in Christ Church in Ontario, will be the visitors. They are on campus from three weeks to two months. Their insights are valuable for a number of reasons.

First, these persons represent roles different from the professor-lecturer the student sees daily in the classroom. Students do not need to depend on the prof to tell them about different approaches to ministry. Now they can talk to and interact with someone involved in that approach, such as ministry in the ghetto, or in Appalachia.

Second, students get acquainted with some of the problems currently facing congregations. One visitor to the Theological Center this fall posed this question to students: When members of the congregation assemble, it is believed that the Holy Spirit is present and that He reveals His will to the gathered congregation. But what happens is that the forceful personalities do most of the speaking. Is it clear that these forceful personalities reveal the leading of the Spirit? Has the congregation really waited upon the Spirit when it has listened to them and been persuaded to come to consensus?

In the conversations which follow such comments, students find in the visitor one who can view the issues from the stance of experience on the field. Students gain insights into the issues "out there." They get "new eyes," as it were, to see themselves in relation to the jobs they are preparing to do.

Seminary students and faculty meet together for chapel two or three times a week as an important part of the Experience in Christian Community. Forums, Koinonia meetings, and field work in local congregations or approved agencies are also essential to each student's weekly activities.

4. Transcultural Term

Each student is encouraged to give time during his course of studies as an assistant to a missionary or a national Christian in an overseas program. Designed to broaden students' understandings of the worldwide church, the program gives students insights into how the Gospel is translated into another culture.

For example, in the nineteenth century the European missionary to Africa imposed on the national Christians a church building with pulpit and pews, and a worship pattern that called for little active participation by the audience except listening to the preacher. Such a pattern simply does not meet the Nigerian or Ghanaian where he is. He thinks of church as a joyous celebration. When the offering is taken, he and his fellow Christians move around in a circle tossing their coins into a basket. After the coins have been collected, they are redistributed so that everyone in the church, whether or not he had money in the first part of the ceremony, will have coins to toss as the members turn again and again to the offering box. Because the missionary failed to appreciate significant cultural differences, the African Christian was caught between the God who made him rhythmic and said, "Get up and move around" and the missionary who tried to remake him over his own mold and said to him, "Sit still and listen while I preach."

Students who go abroad will observe the rich diversity in the worldwide church. They will also note how the church must be free from secular government and the state — an important concern for the "free" church.

In brief, the Dean's Seminar saw the "transcultural term" (a term of studies that goes beyond American Western culture into another one) as an opportunity to "detribalize" students. That is, the student learns to sit at the feet of a Christian leader of a "tribe" different from his own and learns from firsthand experience that "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor free . . . for you are all one in Christ Jesus" (Gal. 3:28, R.S.V.).

5. Off-campus Theological Term

The foremost reason for encouraging a student to enroll in a Lutheran or Presbyterian, or Anglican seminary for a brief term is to plunge him into a setting different from his own. There he will begin to realize a number of things.

First, it may well be his first major occasion when he is called upon to think through his own theological stance and commitment in a setting different from his own and to talk about his points of view in this setting of critical though sympathetic inquiry. That is, he discovers for himself the value of being a Mennonite.

Second, he will discover and learn to appreciate other Christians and traditions, many of which he will encounter during his future years in the ministry. There will be effectiveness to this learning because it will not be confined to dogmatic content in the classroom, but rather be "on-the-spot" with chances to take part in worship services, discussions in the student lounge and apartments or residence halls, perhaps even serve in a congregation of that denomination near campus.

Third, the fact is that when he accepts his first assignment with a congregation he will, from the first day, work in the context of many congregations. He will be calling on persons in the community who are likely to be, for example, Methodists, Lutherans, Presbyterians, or Catholics. His neighbors may be of some other denomination. He will be working with the local ministerial associations. The off-campus theological term is an introduction to what he will meet later in his ministry in a North American congregation or on the mission field if he is invited by Christian leaders of the church in the "third world" to be their co-minister.

6. Continuing Education

The new seminary program recognizes the importance of keeping ministers on the field up to date. Illustrations of ways in which continuing education may be carried on include personal and mail contacts, arranging for conferences, workshops, and seminars throughout the constituency, schools for ministers on campus, refresher courses, development of reading lists and book reviews.

Open to all ministers, not just alumni, the program will attempt to enhance the ministry of many persons in the church, including pastors, missionaries, teachers, writers, administrators, and other congregational leaders.

A coordinator as well as the necessary financial resources must be found to make this program fully effective.

Other Developments

While the Dean's Seminar was considering the details of the new program, another group — the Seminary Planning Committee — was studying a proposed move of Goshen's seminary to the campus of the Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries in Elkhart and the setting up of a separate board of control to operate the seminary. Wide counsel was obtained. Several members of the board and faculty met with representatives of district conferences across the church to discuss these matters. Seminary alumni were also consulted. The consensus was that the move and the setting up of a separate board were generally understood and accepted across the church.

A schedule of meetings was set up to keep the Goshen College Board of Overseers and the executive committee of the Mennonite Board of Education informed of counsel from the constituency and other developments in the planning. Favorable action by the Mennonite Board of Education made possible the appointment of the Goshen Seminary Board of Overseers last April. One of the first tasks of this board was to name a seminary presidential selection committee, which is now working to name a president to assume his responsibilities by July 1, 1970.

The physical move of Goshen's seminary to the Elkhart campus was made in September before fall classes resumed. The geographic move, which associates Goshen Biblical Seminary with the General Conference Mennonite-controlled Mennonite Biblical Seminary but does not merge them, plus the separate board of control make it possible for the new program of the seminary to develop more fully. A new president will make complete the identity that the seminary must have if it is to be of maximum service to the church.

The Goshen Biblical Seminary, with a new program and its own board of control and chief executive, will also be developing its own financial program, independent of Goshen College. When the new Seminary Board of Overseers recently reviewed the financial requirements, it decided to request $4 a member a year for the Seminary from the supporting conferences of the Mennonite Church. The figure is an increase of $2 a member a year because gifts from the church in recent years have actually covered less than half of the Seminary costs, with the remaining costs being paid from undesignated contributions to Goshen College. In a joint letter to congregations, Richard J. Yordy, chairman of the Seminary Board of Overseers, and Paul Mininger, president of the Seminary, have said to pastors and treasurers: "The changes [in the Seminary] are being made in the conviction that a stronger Seminary program will result and that the needs of the brotherhood will be better served. . . . We sincerely hope the Seminary will receive your serious consideration and that your congregation will make its contributions to the Seminary beginning this year."

The seminary building at the college adds much needed classroom and office space to the campus plant. This year it is being used largely by the English department and the Bible, religion, and philosophy division. Final use of the building has not yet been determined.

You can have your cake . . .
and eat it too.

By giving, you can continue to receive.

Let's say you enter into a Charitable Gift Annuity agreement with Goshen College. Most important, your gift will help Goshen College continue to prepare young men and women for lives of usefulness.

But you learn that by giving you receive. First, you are guaranteed an income for the rest of your life. For example, if your annuity is for yourself only, and:

Your age is	Your rate of return is
72	6.0 per cent
75	6.5 per cent
78	7.1 per cent
81	7.7 per cent
84	8.0 per cent

Second, you pay income taxes on only part of that income.

You even receive more than that. If the gift money were in your savings account instead of a Charitable Gift Annuity, you would receive less than the published rate of return on your principle. Why? Because you must pay income tax on bank interest. That's another way your spendable income can increase by entering into a Charitable Gift Annuity Agreement.

Your annuity also gives you generous tax deductions the first year. And that means more real income for you that year.
